Dear Sirs,

We are using a large quantity of your liniment for the past year. We use it in bulk for veterinary purposes and find it most effective. We also handle a large quantity in small bottles which we sell through our various commissaries. This is also much in demand and gives satisfaction among the men.

Yours very truly,
The Davison Lumber Co.

School Books

(Eastern Chronicle)

Our opinion of the school readers is that the government should put the printing and publishing of them up to public tender and contract, and then, that care should be taken to place the books in the hands of the children as near cost as possible; that is, with no rake off attached thereto. It is, also our opinion that parents have been more worried by changes than by price. If T. Eaton and Co.'s books will be taken the change will be complete and costly.

Last summer at a convention of Ontario school teachers these readers were severely criticised both as to material and workmanship, and it looks as if a change there is in order, if a change comes, a change would be necessary here, if T. Eaton's books are taken—in fact the province would be subject to the whims of educationists in Ontario.

An interesting bit of history lies in the fact that at one time in this province the law regarding school books was that a section could procure school books from the Department of Education, the Government paying half the cost. This was abandoned by the section.

Another bit of history is that a company in this county presented the schools with the necessary books. This plan gave rise to such wilful waste by the destruction of books that it was abandoned by the consent of parents, teachers and company—the parents being the protestors because the indulgence in waste of books by the children led to habits of waste. So for forty years the system in Nova Scotia is to pay for the books—but it is the duty of the government to take care that the changes are not brought about by impulse, and that the charge for the books is the value thereof.

The Division was organized just twenty-six years ago that night by F.M. Lewis, with thirty-three charter members, two of which are still members. This year we held open Division. The night was stormy but quite a number gathered and a nice program was carried out by our young sisters, after which there were speeches and music and the exercises were closed by singing 'God Save the King.'

THEIR MISTAKE.

Some Very Strange Oversight by the Home Officials.

The fact that the words "and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas" were omitted from the printed copy of King George's proclamation is, by no means, the only remarkable instance of official oversight. In fact, only a few days later King Edward was described, on the breast-plate of his coffin, as having departed this life in the ninth, instead of tenth, year of his reign.

This curious instance of oversight reminds one that when peace was proclaimed after the late Boer War the Plymouth folk were so enthusiastically engaging themselves in celebrating the occasion that they forgot to send word about the notable event to the lighthouse-keepers at the Eddystone! And for eleven days those quiet men, guarding the lonely lighthouse, wondered what all the display of rockets, colored lights, etc., they saw night after night might mean.

Even more extraordinary was an oversight of the Foreign Office many years ago. The inhabitants of one of the Palmerston Islands, in the Pacific, under British rule, were dependent for much of their food—apart from what their own island produced—on the shipping supplies arranged for them by the Foreign Office in Whitehall. But for nine months not a ship came to the islands, and as the extreme heat was killing the coconuts trees and every other eatable fruit, the plight of the islanders was desperate. The people were without food, and the actual owner of the islands died from want; whilst most of the residents were perishing, and many had actually died, when at last a vessel named The Empire, chartered to call, and thus enabled them to get some food. Then it was discovered that the Whitehall rulers had entirely forgotten to arrange for the usual supplies during that year!

Australian officials have similarly forgotten their duty before-to-day. The food supply of the lighthouse crew on Percy Island, off the coast of Queensland, is supposed to be delivered once each month. But after June, 1900, no food arrived there at all until a British vessel, happening to pass the island in October, landed a boat crew by chance at the lighthouse. Then the sailors were astounded to find there some twenty men, nearly all insane for want of food!

Once, the British House of Commons surprised the inhabitants of Chelmsford by passing a bill which provided in one clause for the rebuilding of a new goal there, and then went on to order, in a subsequent clause, that the new goal should be erected on the site of the old one, and that as much of the old material as possible should be used in building the new place.

So far, so good. But when Parliament, in its wisdom, added yet another clause, directing that the old goal should be allowed to remain, and still do duty until the new one was ready for use, things began to get a trifle complicated.

How King George is Guarded.

There are few more interesting branches of the detective service than guarding royalty, although the responsibilities of such work are tremendous.

Inspector Spencer, who follows King George, must be ready to appear in a lounge-suit, shooting jacket or evening dress, as the occasion demands, and he is never far from his royal master's side. He must know how to deal with a thousand and one emergencies, must be the essence of diplomacy, must prevent the innumerable cranks from worrying royalty when it travels by the train, or other means. One harmless lunatic in the habit of travelling wherever King Edward went, and it was Mr. Spencer's duty to keep this gentleman from seeing his Majesty, except from a distance.

Royal personages, in the majority of cases, communicate their plans to their detectives beforehand, and then have a written program to guide them in making the necessary arrangements for safety. King Alfonso, however, is a notable exception; and on one occasion he dropped through a window, and went off on a shopping expedition, completely outwitting his protectors.

Judges' Gowns.

The London Law Times points out that the silk gown of the bench and bar owes its original use to its having been adopted as a form of mourning at the death of an English sovereign. On the death of Queen Mary in 1694 the present silk gown was introduced as mourning and, having been found more convenient and less troublesome than the regular dress then worn, has since been continued. The late Sir Frederick Pollock is said to have expressed an opinion in reference to the ordinary costume of the bar that the bench and bar went into mourning at the death of Queen Anne and have so remained ever since. American courts adopted the gown along with the English common law.

To Get Household Statistics.

A novel method has been adopted to ascertain the cost of living in various parts of Australia. To this end the Commonwealth statistician is getting into communication with persons willing to keep a record of their household expenses from July 1 next to June 30, 1911, the year of the census. Persons who forward their names are to be supplied with a suitably prepared book in which to keep the record, which when completed, is to be placed in the envelope provided, and posted to the Commonwealth Statistician.

Forestry in Australia.

Much attention has been paid to forestry in Australia recently. The Victorian Government this winter will plant nearly a million young pines, spruces, and hardwoods, and will sow 125,000 immediately. Probably four million seedlings will be available in 1911. The New South Wales Government now inserts re-forestation clauses in its leases. It is taking this step to prevent undue destruction of the valuable pine and iron-bark belts when the flint scrub is thrown open.

Gourlay Pianos

are all of One Quality—the Very Best. If we took a commission to make a single Piano for $1,000 it could be of No Better Material or Workmanship than we regularly use in any one of our simpler, more moderately-priced styles. We could spend more money on ornamentation, but nothing to improve quality.
