Simple Tests for Water.

Now that people are visiting the country, camping out, etc., it will be necessary for them to pass upon the purity of new supplies of water, a few trustworthy tests for this purpose, culled from the 'Massachusetts Medical Journal,' are timely, especially as they are not based on chemical analysis.

First boil and fill a bottle made of colorless glass with the water and look through it at some dark object. The water should then appear perfectly colorless and free from suspended matter; a muddy or turbid appearance indicates the presence of soluble organic matter or of soluble matter in suspension.

If this test is passed successfully empty out some of the water, leaving the bottle about half-full; cork up and place it for a few hours in a warm place. Shake up the water, remove the cork and critically smell the air contained in the bottle. If it has any smell, and especially if the odor is in the least repulsive, the water should be rejected for domestic use. The advantage of heating the water is that this sometimes develops an odor that would not otherwise be perceptible.

Pure water should be tasteless and remain so after being warmed. It should also be odorless.

A very practical test for sewage contamination or the presence of putrescible organic matter is as follows. A clean pint bottle is filled three-fourths full of the water to be tested, and in the water is dissolved a teaspoonful of the purest sugar—loaf or granulated will answer. The bottle is then corked and kept in a warm place for two days. If after from twenty-four to forty-eight hours the water becomes cloudy or muddy it is unfit for domestic use. If it remains perfectly clear it is probably safe for use.—'Christian Work.'
