Mr. Copeland:

Dear Sir,—After taking several bottles of your Consumption Cure, I would like to make known to others the benefit I derived from its use.

I was very much run down when I commenced taking your medicine, but now I have fully recovered, and in four months have gained 17 pounds. I cannot speak too highly of it, and will be pleased to recommend it to any who enquire to its merits. You may publish this latter if you wish, and, if so, I trust that it will reach the eyes of some poor suffers and save them from the dreadful disease of consumption.
