about $900. The chattels have been sold, which with book debts collected realized about $4000 and something more may be collected from the books. After paying the rent, taxes, law and insolvency costs the workmen will be paid a dividend on their claims, but the general and ordinary creditors will get nothing.

—Messrs. R. C. Strickland &amp; Co. of Lakefield, lumber merchants, who assigned about a year ago and whose estate, with the exception of a heavily mortgaged saw mill, has been disposed of by the assignee, have just succeeded in effecting a compromise at 15 cents on the dollar, and are again preparing to begin business. The Stricklands have been unfortunate. In 1870 the firm of Strickland Bros. failed disastrously with liabilities of some $60,000, while their available assets barely sufficed to pay the men's wages and costs, the ordinary creditors getting nothing. In 1873 R. C. Strickland and C. A. Boulton commenced business again, the latter putting in $2000. After continuing for three years it was found impossible to go on, and Boulton went out, taking a mortgage on the mill property for his capital. His place was taken by R. A. Strickland, who was supposed to be a man of means, and whose name gave credit to the concern. It turns out, however, that he put nothing into the business, and although possessed of a wife having an independent fortune had no means whatever of his own. The unsecured liabilities of the concern amount to $175,000. A large part of their property, including a steam saw mill, embraced in a mortgage to Ross &amp; Co., of Quebec, and valued by them at $30,000, was transferred to Ross &amp; Co. at their valuation. The principal creditors are the Ontario Bank $85,000; Ross &amp; Co. unsecured $57,000; the other sums are smaller, and principally to local men.
