

Meyer, Hoppner

HOPPNER MEYER was the son of a London engraver, and was one of the first portrait artists of real excellence to migrate to Canada. No dates of his birth and death are procurable, but he exhibited eight works in an exhibition of the Toronto Society of Arts, held in the old City Hall in 1847, and was a member of the Society. He painted small portraits in water colours and made drawings in pencil and chalk. Some of his works were engraved by himself.
