PASSIVE.

Verbs passive are called regular, when they form their perfect participle by the addition of d or ed, to the verb; as, from the verb, "To love," is formed the passive, "I am loved; I was loved, I shall be loved," &c.

A passive verb is conjugated by adding the perfect participle to the Auxiliary to be, through all its changes of number, person, mood and tense, in the following manner.

* The remaining tenses of this mood are, in general, similar to the correspondent tenses of the Indicative Mood. See the note at page 30.
