THE PALE WORKER.

Lo! yonder I see the pale worker, Stitch, stitch, without pause, without stay,
Since first I remember him stitching,
And paler and weaker each day.

But from dawn till the sunset and darkness,
The tear-drops fall heavy and slow, Till the seams of the cloth he is stitching
Are wet with the vintage of woe.

I pray you, how long must he drive it,
This wheel that is red for a sign?
Can you reckon the years of his bondage,
And the end—that grim secret—divine!

Too hard are such questions to answer,
But this I am bold to declare—When death shall have slain the pale worker,
Another will sit in his chair.

Literary Tablet.

"The time will come," said the woman, who was packing for a trip, "when we shall take our literature in small tablets, as we take other medicine. Then the traveler can slip into her glove a tablet or two for train consumption; and another tablet to devour before going to bed, etc. There are certain books I never like to get very far from. They are the bright, particular books that restore me to myself after vexation, discomfort and too much world. It is a trifle a nuisance to carry them all along, and so I wish that I might just slip into my handbag a small tablet of Eur-son, a pill or two of Carlyle, a tiny box of Tennyson or Arnold powders, and a miniature vial of Mark Twain. Where-after I might set forth on my travels braced up for most anything."

In Society.

Ralph H. Burgess and Miss Lillias Burgess of the St. George are spending a few weeks at Atlantic City.

A most successful "Evening With Canadian Composers" was given by the Elks, in their clubhouse on Saturday the 20th inst. The rooms were beautifully decorated with flags and bowers, and the program furnished was of such high order that Dr. Torrington rose to express his surprise and pleasure, not only at the splendid compositions, but also at the excellent manner in which each number was rendered. The assisting artists were Dr. Anger, Dr. T. B.
Richardson, Messrs. Sherlock Forsyth, Blair, Lantz, and others. The program of songs and piano was given by Dr.
Vogt and Dr. Albert Ham. Much respect is due Mr. W. Y. Archibald for the able manner in which the program was carried out.

The Canadian Suffragist Association are giving an informal dinner at Williams' Cafe, 174 Yonge-street, on Thursday, April 25, at 7 p.m. sharp. Many speakers will be their views on "Political Equality."

Mrs. James Sneak, president of the Typo Auxiliary, gave a progressive chance at her home the other evening.
Miss Orr and Miss Johnston assisted in the musical part of the program. The prizes were won by Mrs. D. McDouggal, Mrs. C. H. Wilson, Miss McGowan, Mr. Conway and Mr. Smith.

Mrs. Bell of Chatham is visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. K. Brant, and will receive with her to-morrow.

Mrs. Belton and Mrs. Gunn are visiting Mrs. Charles Mitchell, Bernard-avenue.

A concert under the auspices of the Young People's Association will be given in St. George's school house, Stephanie-street, on Thursday evening.
Those who have kindly consented to take part are: Miss Hilda Boulton, Miss Baxter, Miss Margaret M. George, Miss Helen Strong, Miss Gage, Lissant Beardmore, Arthur George, Henry I. Lantz

SPRING STYLES IN SHOES

World Pattern Department

Women of fashion are becoming so critical regarding their accessories that the success or failure of any department in a dry goods store depends upon the buyer's ability to discern what the popular things are and the readiness with which he can cater to any sudden and decided vogue.

The shoe department is now facing one of those situations which tend to make or mar the season's profits.
Not only are shoes for the coming summer in style and cut, but they are also new in weight and color.
The sheer, dressy type of costume, which has come so strongly into vogue, requires a shoe of corresponding lightness. The very mannish lasts, in heavy weights, which have frequently characterized shoe fashions, are being replaced to a considerable extent by the lighter and cooler glazed kid, which the soft and pliant as cloth, possesses good qualities.

In addition to the favor which is being given to light-weight shoes, there are specifications as to color, which will keep the shoe buyer on the alert.
The strong vogue of the present moment is golden brown, the old shades of tan shine from the reflected glory of the ultra fashionable brown shoe.

Through the early spring months there has been decided favor shown to the high button shoe, with either matching or fancy top, but from now on it is anticipated that low shoes will have their innings.

Numerous styles in low shoes will vie with each other in popularity, from the sensible Oxford, with medium heel to the very high arched Louis and Cuban heel shoe.

The new pumps are shown with ribbon bows, as well as with bows of leather in matching tone. The flat pump bow is also seen, but the newer idea is to use the more dressy bow resembling that on the low tie. Some fashionable women still cling to the colonial shoe, which with its quaint line is very becoming to certain types of feet.

Very attractive styles are shown in unressed kid, in brown, gray and black in three-hole ties having ribbon lacing, the high arch and Cuban heel.
Leathers in brown, tan and patent leather are provided for dressy wear, and a popular style shows the leather boot shoe, with either match-
have their innings.

Shoes for house wear are an important part of the fashionable woman's outfit. Fancy colors, as well as brown and black, are used in these lines and favor is still extended to the pompadour trimming.

In view of the great popularity of the brown kid shoe, it is anticipated that the white canvas and white buckram shoe will be much a factor of the trade as they were last year.

There is also a good demand for children's shoes in brown and tan, as well as in white. The styles often followed by women, it is anticipated that brown will prove a favorite color for men's shoes later in the season.

To take the place of the ooz-calf tops, there is now being introduced a brown shoe with upper of water-proof English calfskin and a matching shade. A novel feature of this shoe is a narrow piping of kid, which runs down the instep and up the back seam, so as to save the wear of the calf skin.
This fabric has an advantage over the ooz calf for the summer season, being of lighter weight and, therefore, cooler.

Apart from the favor which has been shown to the high shoe, or "boot," a good deal is expected of the Oxford, Kingston, Miss Mabel King, fifth daughter of George King, was married to Edward Herbert Pense of Toronto, only son of Edward J. B. Pense, M.L.A., by Archdeacon MacMorin.

Owing to the death of the mother of Mrs. Hensack, president of the Trafalgar Daughters, the meeting announced for this afternoon will be postponed until the first week in June.

1864—Misses' and Girls' Plaited Wrapper.

Paris Pattern No. 1864.
All Seams Allowed.
There are many times when a wrapper is needed in brown, tan and patent leather would be useful for a young girl and therefore such a garment becomes a necessary part of her wardrobe equipment. It might also be made for summer wear in dimity, cotton voile, lawn, percale or any of the washable fabrics.
The pattern is in five sizes—8 to 17 years. For a miss of 15 years, the wrapper requires 8 1/2 yards of goods 20 inches wide, or 5 1/2 yards 36 inches wide, or 4 1/2 yards 42 inches wide; 1 3/4 yards of ribbon for ties and 2 yards of edging to trim.
Price of pattern, 10 cents.

ford, which is always more or less staple. Still more popular, however, will be the tie and the pump, with bow of ribbon or of leather.
A small novelty is the low shoe with two buttons, which has much the effect of the pump, but fits a little more snugly and neatly. The patent-leather shoe of this character has, in some cases, a top of white kid. Again the shoe is of brown kid, with a top of brown ooz.

Mrs. J. W. St. John, widow of the late Speaker, will shortly remove to Galt.

The World's Serial Story.

On the morning of July 10 Faring set off alone upon a long-delayed journey to New York and to Washington, where there were a number of important and pressing matters which demanded his personal attention. He was to be gone three days—an eternity! And, at first, when it was found that the long-neglected affairs might no longer be neglected, and that the journey must be made, Beatrix had firmly refused to allow him to go alone.

"Of course, I shall go with you!" she said. "Naturally! If I remained here I should die before the first day was done." But as they spoke more of it, and it appeared that Faring must be very busy occupied during the whole of the time, she altered her first determination and, upon her husband's advice, decided to stay at home. Moreover, the weather was very hot, and traveling would be a torture. There was another thing also to influence her.
She was by nature thoroughly intrepid and experimental, and the instinct which leads a child to stare itself before a prospective fever moved her to flit upon herself this stretch of three barren days by way of sweeten-ing the long days to follow.

"It will be good for me," she said—"good for both. This going away will be food and drink and air and sunshine for a little time. It will be for me starvation, almost literally, but I shall be rather glad to die of it, and I shall still—and alone—think over my blessings. I shall appreciate you, highness, when you return. I shall appreciate you amazingly!"

They made quite a little tragedy of his going. Laughing at themselves shamelessly, the while, Beatrix followed the trap to the front gate of the long, laurel-bordered lane, which led out to the highway a half-mile distant, and she waved a bit as the trap disappeared down the lane. Then she laughed at her tears, and having wept a little more, walked slowly back to the cottage and then to the garden which she loved.

Buchanan's Wife

By Dustus Forman.

rangement With Harper & Brothers

It appeared that the late roses were unwell, and the gardener, a surly old Scotsman, was among them, spraying them with an evil liquid out of a bushel. Beatrix stopped a moment to watch him, and the man lifted up his voice in lament over his perishing charges, which alone, of all things in the world, he loved.

"Ye maun find me a helper, mem!" he said, despondently. "I hae nae heart for the grass-cutting, an' the waterin' an' a' an' yon stable lads are no matter o' use. Ye maun find me a helper to tak the rough o' the work. My roses hae need o' me a' the while."

Beatrix tried to make a proper show of sympathy and concern, but, altho she also loved her roses, she could not, in just that moment, make a tragedy out of them.

"I'm sorry," she said. "It would be quite too bad to have them die.
Wouldn't it? To a helper, tho, I hardly know what to do. I expect we shall have to wait until Mr. Faring returns—unless, that is, you know of some one you could hire. Do you?"

The old man shook his white head.
"He said," he said, "ye hae nae heart
an' a' an' yon stable lads are no matter o' use. Ye maun find me a helper
to tak the rough o' the work. My
roses hae need o' me a' the while."

She had meant to go to the little pavilion on the hill, where Phryne looked after the sea, but it was empty there in the morning, and, after a moment, she turned back and once more went down the hill, and then the front garden to that long, laurel-bordered lane where she and her husband often walked early in the day.

It was a shady lane, where the sun came thru only in quivering, dappled flecks of gold. Birds dwelt there in a discursive murmur, and squirrels ran across the roadway or, under the high bank, sat up to peer inquisitively at the chance intruder. There were rust-lings and squeakings of life from the thicket at either side, and the patient still scent of earth and of things growing—the rich aroma of nature's fecundity, the summer air which is compounded of a thousand thousand exquisite odors and some not so exquisite—the mother earth teeming with richness, drooping under a July sun.

Beatrix walked slowly down the lane over those trembling flecks of gold which the sun filtered thru the vault of leaves, and with her went a Russian wolf-hound which had followed her from the house. It was a dog which she had owned in the old days at Buchanan Lodge, a very beautiful beast, but, after its kind, unexpectably distasteful of all the world and of the thousand common weaknesses of baser canine flesh. On this morning, as always, it paced soberly beside its mistress, paying no heed whatever to the fascinating sights and smells and mysteries of the wayside. A small red squirrel, very intent upon some affair of moment, sprang up almost from under the dog's feet, and there was a confused dash into the shelter of the thicket to one side, but the Borzoi only rolled a careless eye in that direction.
It was a most superior dog.

A little bent man in ragged garments came shuffling up the lane, evidently from the highway beyond. He held in one hand his battered straw hat—the remains of a cast-off "panama"—and in the other a gnarled stick. He seemed a quaint little man, with thin, gray-ish hair and sharp features, but his step had none of the weary lag of the professional tramp's step. He walked about shufflingly, with a certain odd spryness, as if he were glad to be abroad on that fine morning. And as he walked, he crooned some tuneless song over and over in a dry voice, turning his head from side to side like a bird to peer into the thicket.

satisfied.

A woman's home is where she eats and sleeps; a woman living and working in Toronto, but claiming residence elsewhere, must be entered in District No. 1.
It is easier to answer questions than to correct a mistake. Do not hesitate to ask questions that you want answered.

Be sure that you receive a receipt for all coupons left at the office.
If you do not they will not be counted.
Any further information desired may be obtained by calling at The World Office, or by calling telephone Main 252 and asking for the lose any votes. Watch the expiration dates on your ballots.

SPECIAL BALLOTS.—The same instructions apply to the special ballots issued for paid-in-advance subscriptions.
USE YOUR FRIENDS.—Hundreds of people have no personal friends in this contest. They are friends of your friends or of your friends' friends. If you have your friends working hard enough for you thousands of votes can be gathered in from just such people.

Enlist the interest of your friends and friends' friends. Use your telephone. If you have friends in other districts write them letters.
If you learn of any persons who are not World readers—secure their subscription whether you know them or not. Work for special ballots, they count the most. Ask your political friends to furnish ideas. They know how to cover the field.

Special order blanks for subscriptions can be secured from The Toronto World Trip to London Editor. If you belong to a church let your church friends know you are running.

HOW TO GET VOTES.—If you belong to any organization let your fellow members know you are in the race.
Don't knock the other candidates. Remember the Golden Rule.
Don't forget that children can do the most effective work in collecting coupons. Every little helps.

Should your father, brother or friends belong to any organizations, get them to work for you.
Do not let a day pass without casting a ballot. Success is the
