Pen Sketches of People.

General Booth at Home.

The private life of that very public man, General Booth, who has just returned from visiting the Australian contingent of the Salvation Army, is carefully protected from the popular gaze. It is doubtful whether, out of the thousands of his soldiers, a score could name his place of residence. He lives, on the rare occasions when he is not travelling, at Hadley Wood, near Barnet, in a red brick villa that is close to the station, and distinguished from others in the road by the poverty of its window curtains. A young man with the blue serge raiment and brass collar letters of the Salvationist and a Remington typewriter are visited on the station of the station of the salvationist and a Remington typewriter are which is a solution of the salvationist and a Remington typewriter are the present opinion of the world, he cares had brass collar letters of the Salvationist and a Remington typewriter are the salvationist and a Remington typewriter are the salvationist and a Remington typewriter are

St. Petersburg, July 24.—The Czarewitch's remains arrived here at 5 o'clock this afternoon. A great solemn gathering of the members of the imperial family and officials met the body at the station. The Czar apd the Grand Duke carried the coffin to the funeral car and the imposing procession started for the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul in the fortress.

Dunn Last Night—The Owner Claimed It.

James Dunn of Starteet went down to the waterfront last night and strolled and strolled along the breakwater at the foot of Simcoce street. When about 200 yards west of the R. C. Y. C. clubhouse he saw a canoe ficating in the water quite close to, the wharf. With the ald of a boat he secured the drifting canoe and brought it to shore. He afterwards pulled it over to Noverre's boathouse, on the Esplanade, and Mr. Noverre also noticed that one of the paddles and a cushlon were missing.

The canoe was taken out by Edgar Day, a steward of the Island clubhouse of the R. C. Y. C. bh. He spent last evening at the town club and afterwards engaged the canoe.
