TEN-STORY SKYSCRAPER TO BE BUILT IN CITY, DECLARES AGENT, MAINLY FOR OFFICE PURPOSES

Location Not Decided Definite ly, But Richmond Street Site Is Favored—Promoter Thinks the Idea Would Prove Popular.

London is soon to have a skyscraper.

Persistent rumor to this effect which has steadily grown in this city recently was verified today by Lieut-Col. A. Campbell, real estate agent, 428 Richmond street, who announces that he has under contemplation the construction of a 19-story office building. The location of the proposed building has not been definitely decided, but the present site of the People's named as the most probable. The location of the proposed building in the construction of the proposed building in the construction of the proposed building in the present site of the People's in annot as the most probable. The time has come in London when a big up-todate office building is necessary. The city can easily stand such a building to accommodate the growing need for the better class offices. At present there is a dearth of office accommodation in the city," the real estate man said.

Generally Popular.

"There is no reason that I can see why a 10-story office building in London would not be as acceptable as in any other city. Where such buildings are common, there is generally a decided preference among office renters to locate in buildings of the skyscraper class,"

Plans for the new building under consideration have been discussed, but building will not start until conditions improve. At present it is said that building conditions are hardly stable enough to warrant the immediate construction of a building of the size under contemplation.

Lieut.-Col. Campbell plans a sky-scraper of the most modern constructs.

A ten-story building in Londom when district will loom far beyone any other structures. The tellets of forothe building in the city now is the Bank of Toronto building in King and Richmond streets.

Lieut.-Col. Campbell plans a sky-scraper of the most modern construction and equipment for offices, with express elevators sufficient to efficiently accommodate the building.
