

THE FORTY-FIRST SESSION
OF THE
Toronto School of Medicine,
IN AFFILIATION WITH THE
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO AND VICTORIA UNIVERSITY.

IN presenting the Announcement of the Forty-first Session of the Toronto School of Medicine, the members of the Faculty have much pleasure in extending hearty thanks to the many friends of the Institution, who, by their generous support and confidence, have assisted in placing the School in the prosperous position which it now occupies.

The opening lecture will be delivered by Dr. J. H. Richardson, on Monday, the 1st day of October, at 4 p.m., when the regular work of the session will commence, and continue until the 1st of April, 1884.

The School building is large and well arranged, and, through the additions which have been made every year for some time past, is now thoroughly equipped with all the apparatus and conveniences required by the rapidly advancing Science of Medicine. There are two large and commodious lecture-rooms. There is a convenient waiting-room for the use of the students, and a large room used as a library and reading-room, also for the use and under the control of the Students' Medical Society. The library contains many of the standard medical works of the day, and in the reading-room are found the leading daily and weekly papers of the Dominion, scientific and illustrated journals of Canada, United States, and Great Britain, and the leading medical periodicals from the same countries.
