THE SUN AND THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT.

The remarkable interest which the Sun is taking in provincial politics is the subject of a good deal of comment and excites some surprise. The Sun is, or claims to be the organ of the Dominion government in St. John, and yet its policy has been such as to create opposition to the government rather than to make friends for it. So long as local politics are not run on Dominion lines it is obviously the duty of government organs like the Sun to avoid local contests which cannot possibly be of the slightest advantage to the government, if won, and which in any case must raise up enemies against it. It is true that we have certain St. John politicians going about and whispering to each other respecting the great advantages the Conservative party would derive it it had the control of the provincial government. In answer to them it is only necessary to point out that the present provincial government is more Conservative than Liberal, and counts among its supporters more Conservatives than Liberals. Can any sane man suppose that if Mr. Blair's government was defeated, a government composed of such men as Silas Alward, A. A. Stockton, George F. Gregory, Harry McKeown, Dr. Atkinson, and Mr. Porter of Victoria, would assist the Dominion government in the next general election? Yet this is the kind of government that would replace the Blair adminstration should the latter be defeated. In the recent Victoria election, the Globe espoused the cause of Mr. Porter because Mr. Porter is a Grit. The Globe was very particular to state the grounds upon which it supported the Opposition man from Victoria, so that neither the Sun nor anyone else had any excuse for being deceived. Mr. Baird, the candidate of the provincial government, is a Conservative, and not only so but he is the strongest supporter that the Honorable John Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, has in the county of Victoria. Yet the best efforts of the Sun, at the recent election, were used to defeat Mr. Baird and at its instance two prominent Grits from St. John Messrs. Alward and Stockton, were sent to Victoria county to assist in the campaign against him. The same eloquent voices that in 1887 were heard in every ward and parish in St. John, county denouncing the "corruption" of the "Tory" government and the "iniquity" of Sir John A. Macdonald, from the public platform, were last month applying the same epithets to Mr. Blair and demanding the rejection of Mr. Baird, his candidate. Yet the Sun approved and applauded those attacks on Mr. Baird by the two to wandering Grits, although it must have known that Mr. Baird was a Conservative long before the Sun came into existence. The Sun approved the attacks of Messrs. Alward and Stockton, on the Tobique Valley Railway and described it as a means of corruption in that county. Yet the Sun must have known that this railway was purely a Dominion enterprise, and that those interested in its construction are the friends and supporters of the Dominion government. This course may appear to be good policy in the eyes of the persons who control the Sun but to all others it seems the height of folly. When another Dominion election comes round Messrs. Alward, Stockton and McKeown will be found denouncing the Dominion government on every platform in this county and Mr. Porter will be working against a Dominion minister in Victoria, yet the Sun gives these Grits its countenance and support and denounces as corrupt every person who has a word to say against its new friends.

A NEW KIND OF RECIPROCITY.

The Grits who have been howling lustily for reciprocity with the United States and censuring the government of Canada because it has not been successful in obtaining a reciprocity treaty, will be greatly disgusted with Senator Aldrich for exposing the hollowness of the pretence that the people of the United States will make a reciprocity treaty with us on any fair terms. Mr. Blaine has been recently talking a good deal about reciprocity but it is reciprocity with the countries of South America for which he is most concerned, and reciprocity with Canada finds no particular favor in his eyes or in the eyes of his friends. The net result of the conferences of the senate finance committee on the question of adding a reciprocity clause to the tariff bill was the introduction of two amendments by Senator Aldrich. One of the amendments is in the shape of a new section, stating that the exemptions from duty of sugar, molasses, tea and hides are made with a view to secure reciprocal trade with countries producing those articles, and it authorizes the president to suspend, by proclamation, the provisions of law for the free introduction of sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides, the product of countries whose laws may be reciprocally unequal and unjust. The duties on sugars are to be fixed as under existing law; the duty on coffee is to be 3 cents a pound, on tea 10 cents a pound and on hides 1½ cents a pound. The second amendment is a proviso to the fish paragraph, and it subjects fish to a duty of only 1½ cents a pound when exported from or the product of any country whenever and only so long as American fishing vessels shall be admitted into all the ports of such country to purchase supplies, including bait, and to land fish for shipment in bond to the United States, without restraint.

Here then is the absurd little mouse which all this reciprocity labor has brought forth. Our fish are to be admitted on payment of a duty of one and a half cents a pound, provided we agree to abandon all the protective clauses of the treaty of 1818. Only this and nothing more.—We are sincerely glad that Senator Aldrich has thus disclosed the intentions of the Republican party with reference to reciprocity. What will the Cartwrights, Lauriers and Blakes say to this?

THE ST. JOHN PROTEST.

The Sun of this morning seems greatly concerned about the St. John Election protest. This is not to be wondered at, now that Mr. Stockton has been admitted to the editorial sanctum of the Sun, and takes a hand in writing its political editorials. The Sun says that "the St. John members have refused to enter into any arrangement for sawing off the petition against them." Will the Sun kindly state when any arrangement was proposed to the St. John members and by whom? The Sun cannot do so for the simple reason that no such arrangement was ever suggested. The Sun also intimates that the St. John members will resign. The public does not need the assurance of our morning contemporary to be satisfied of that. Examination of witnesses on the trial of the election protest would disclose the fact that it cost at least $14,000 to elect those six purists who have been seeking to make the country believe that they floated into the Legislature on the crest of a great popular wave. Acts of personal bribery of the most unblushing character, would be brought to light. It is no wonder the Sun says they will resign.

THE FARMING LANDS OF ST. JOHN RIVER.

From all that we have seen and heard we are well assured that we have on St. John river, and especially in the county of Carleton, farming lands of great fertility; lands which are capable of supporting in comfort and plenty many times the number of those who now occupy them. There is a tendency everywhere in the east, as well in the eastern states as in Canada, to migrate to the west, even although such migration should eventually prove disastrous, as it often does, to the emigrant. This exodus, which the Globe so gloats over, must be replaced, and the best persons to do this are English farmers who have sufficient means to establish themselves on some of the cleared farms on the St. John, which are every now and then coming into the market. The farmer from Great Britain brings with him just that increased knowledge in the ways and means of cattle raising and of farming in general, which our country requires. The English farmer who emigrates to New Brunswick should never be sent into the forests to clear land, which would be putting a man to work at something of which he knows nothing. Then he has also to encounter there the, to him, terrible pest of flies and misquetoes, which lurk under every leaf and beside every brook. If it is to our interest that our vast farming lands should be brought before the English public, the best man to do this undoubtedly is, the English farmer himself, one who knows what our winters are as well as our summers, and it is with much satisfaction that we learn that Mr. F. H. Hale M. P., for Carleton takes Mr. W.H. Boyce, a well-known English farmer, to Carleton county for the purpose of showing him some of the best land there, at Centerville and along the shores of the St. John. We hope that this energetic action of the member for Carleton will awaken the government to the necessities of the case and that they will engage Mr. Boyce or some other competent person to visit the rest of the agricultural lands of New Brunswick, so that the results of his observations may be conveyed to his fellow countrymen abroad. While we have been spending money most lavishly in many ways, in fact wasting large sums of money, the government has paid but very little for printing and circulating knowledge of the country. So many false statements have been made by interested parties here regarding Canada, that people over the water look with much more suspicion upon information coming from Canadians than they would do were it received from one of their own countrymen, more especially when they know him to be a man of character and standing.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Telegraph complains that there are 9000 office holders in Canada. Well what of that, if they are all needed? The editor of the Telegraph began life as an office holder almost thirty years ago and has filled at least one other position in which he received pay from the public since then.

Those people who thought that a dry dock was not needed in St. John have been furnished with a proof to the contrary sooner than they could have expected. If there was a dry dock here the Ulunda would be brought here and not taken to Halifax, and the money it will cost to repair her, $50,000 or more, would be spent in St. John.

With a degree of impertinence which would be incredible were it not known that Mr. Stockton is now engaged in writing political editorials for our morning contemporary, the Sun to-day presumes to discuss the conduct of Mr. Melanson and his relations with the government, and to tender that gentleman some gratuitous advice as to the course he should pursue. Mr. Melanson is one of the most intelligent, respected and independent members of the legislature. He was able to get along very well at the last session without Mr. Stockton's advice, and no doubt he will be able to do the same in the future.

WAKEMAN'S WANDERINGS.

AT GRETNA GREEN,

The Bishop of Gretna Green—He drank two Quarts of Brandy daily and Grew Enormously fat.

GRETNA GREEN, Scotland, July 28, 1890.

The law of marriage in Scotland has always been practically the same as was ancient English law. Scotland, as well as England, at the time of the Reformation refused to accept the provision of the Council of Trent rendering the solemnization of marriage by a priest necessary. The Scottish law always prescribed, and now prescribes, certain ceremonials for observation in the regular celebration of marriage, which included the publications of banns and the officiating by a clergyman. Though any marriage contracted without these ceremonials is "irregular" it may still be absolutely valid. Scottish people, including a large proportion of the clergy themselves, ever sturdily withstood the enactment of laws by Scottish parliament and subsequent to the Union, by the British parliament, for Scotland, which might cloud a so-called "irregular" marriage or heirship of property growing out of such marriage with any legal quibbles of harassments. Public sentiment has always been the sole bar to this form of marriage; they have ever been rare and infrequent among the Scotch themselves and innocent progeny have never been permitted to suffer from condition resultant from that which, while propriety might question its exercise, justice and law regarded as an inalienable human right. From time immemorial all that has been requisite for a valid marriage in Scotland has been an interchange of real and actual consent, constituting at the time given an undeniable intention and determination to enter the relation of husband and wife, with either incontestable written evidence of that fact, or evidences of witnesses before whom the same is declared. This was Scottish law 200 years ago, 100 years ago, and it is Scottish law today. It has never been modified in effect in the slightest degree. The strictest conditions of registration have been imposed as in all other civilized countries; and about the middle of the present century—not because a necessary restriction upon regular or irregular marriages among Scottish people, but wholly in deference to English clamor for a check upon the "Gretna" and "Coldstream" marriages of English people—an additional requisite was provided to the effect that at least one of the contracting parties must have been an actual resident of any parish of Scotland for 21 days preceding marriage.

In other words, any marriage in Scotland, always has been, and now is, a valid marriage by civil contract; and the requisites for marriages here to-day are precisely the same as they always have been, with the exception of the safeguard of subsequent registration, and the trifling condition of brief residence of one of the contracting parties. That the Scotch marriage laws have been liberal, wise and humane, and that the best social results in Scotland are directly attributable to the same, admit of no denial in the face of the incontestable fact that in no other known country is the marital relation held more sacred; and when statistics also show, as they do, that social scandals arising out of unhappy marriages, and appeals to courts for severance of the marriage bond, are practically unknown. The proposition therefore can be safely advanced that the Toryocracy of the English law inspired by the church autocracy in England, and not any inherent unwisdom of Scottish law, was solely responsible for the unenviable notoriety of famous and infamous Gretna Green.

There seems to be no way of ascertaining the exact date of the first irregular marriage at Gretna, or of discovering the degrees through which its humble priest of Hymen reached his zenith of fame. But by dint of perserverance and good fortune I at last set eyes on the record of the first marriage of which any record is preserved at Gretna. The date is 1771, or but seventeen years subsequent to the passage of Lordchancellor Hardwicke's English Marriage Act, and it is not unlikely that this one was the first; the heralding of the ludicrous adventures of the parties to the same being quite sufficient for directing attention to a new way of escape from the rigors of English marriage laws. The young man and woman who at this date attained bliss by the Gretna route were John Edgar, St. Mary's parish, and Jean Scott, of the parish of Hetherel both in the adjoining English county of Cumberland. These two, tradition hath it, instead of coming by coach-and-four over the old post route from Carlisle, escaped their relatives by boat across the Solway; were upset by storm and an incoming tide, whose violence drowned one of its pursuers and caused the others to abandon the chase; the couple themselves barely escaping with their lives; and, bedraggled in brine and sand, finally made their way on foot from Brewhouses, where they reached shore on the Scottish side, to the safe haven of Gretna Green.

This marriage, as well as thousands following, was performed by Joseph Paisley, who from this date until the time of his death, in 1814, a period of 43 years, was the most notorious, if not noted, man in Scotland, as well as the most execrated single individual known to the annals of English social anathema. From all accounts this Joseph Paisley was an odd character. He was of unusual height and frame, and was accorded one of the strongest men in Scotland. He was a tobacconist—not a blacksmith, as according to general literary tradition—and presided over the destinies of an insignificant licensed depot for tea, tobacco and snuff, where also smuggled whiskey was to be had by the "muckle right sort" who could be trusted. Gretna Green then, as now while the western end of Springfield village, consisted or not more than half a dozen houses; a little cluster of buildings about the olden farmstead of Meg's-hill. There was the residence of Colonel Maxwell, an extensive land-owner, the old straw-thatched kirk with its little kirk-yard in which I now find head-stones in memory of Paisley and his successors as "Bishop of Gretna" as they were each styled, the parish manse behind the kirk, a carpenter's shop, a cottage or two, and the vile little shop of Paisley. The man was so grossly ignorant that he could scarcely write his name, but was still possessed of much canny shrewdness and cunning. He is credited with tremendous feats of strength, and with his two hands he could straighten a horse-shoe in its cold state. He was also the possessor of such stentorian lungs that his helloa could be heard further than any post-horn in use between Carlisle and Glasgow; while be was the most capable drinker then known in Scotland—a no little tribute at any time to bibulous prowess. As his fame and income increased, he became a tremendous mass of fat, and, while never known to be drunk, consumed two English quarts of brandy daily. The fact is of record that on one occasion he sat down with a bottle-companion on Monday morning to an anker of Cognac, and without aid in its drinking, or at any time being intoxicated, they kicked the empty cask out of the door on the succeeding Saturday. The outcry throughout England over the Edgar-Scott marriage in 1791, simply resulted in turning the attention of countless other couples to Gretna, and the insignificant hamlet became instantly famous. Paisley was threatened with all manner of harm, upon which he set Scotland and England at defiance, all of which gave him added importance and dignity. He was canny enough to secure the highest Scotch legal advice, and immediately settled the form of precedure according to law, by attesting marriages simply as a witness. The absolute legality of these Gretna marriages thus established and advertised, their renown and that of the man Paisley completed the essentials for acquainting every soul in England with the extraordinary opportunities offered for evading English law. Paisley gave up the selling of tea, tobacco and snuff for the more lucrative vocation of self-constituted "Bishop of Gretna;" the Maxwell residence was transformed into a commodious inn; extra relays of horses and chaises for use of pursued and pursuers were soon in requisition at convenient points for an hundred miles' distance south of Carlisle, in England, and a flood-tide set in towards this little Scottish hamlet which, in its aggregate of throbbing-hearted humans, far exceeded the mightiest army that Scottish or Saxon king ever hurled against enemy across this weird old Scottish Border.
