The Assembly Election.

Thursday last being nomination day for candidates in the election for the Provincial House of Assembly, the High Sheriff opened his election court in the usual form at the Court House, Newcastle, at eleven o'clock a. m.

There was quite a waiting-period before the first nomination was made and some little impatience was manifested by several electors present to have all the nominations in and the speeches of candidates made. The nominations at last came slowly in the following order:—

THOS. F. GILLESPIE, by Wm. Wyse, Thomas Holmes, L. J. Tweedie and others. THOMAS TROY, by E. P. Williston, Colin McDougall and others. JOHN BRUCE, by Enoch Fleet, Jas. Iny and others. MICHAEL ADAMS, by John Gallaway, John O'Brien and others. ERNEST HUTCHISON, by Wm. Wyse, E. P. Williston and others. MR. GILLESPIE.

Thos. F. Gillespie, Esq., who had demanded a poll several times while the election was in progress, and who had also brought up the matter of ballots to be used at the different polling places. It was finally arranged that ballots with all the Candidates' names, either with or without the initials of their Christian names, might be used, the voters to mark out any two or more names as they pleased.

Mr. Gillespie took the platform and said that he desired the electors to judge him by his acts in the Legislature and the manner in which he had discharged his public duties. Four years ago there was a contest for the Assembly in which all the Candidates, save one, were opposed to the Government; he had said he would oppose any reconstruction of that Government; he had said his word but would make no such pledge now, because, if the present Government was sustained by a majority of the members to be returned at the pending elections, he would support it. He would help them turn them out. He would give the Government a horse to live in, but not willing to pay for cutting his wood, hauling his water, etc., and he thought His Honor ought to pay the Government's expenses. If he should be again returned he would make it his special duty to look after the roads and bridges. He was the only Chatham candidate and it was, therefore, only fair that he should be returned. He therefore hoped that Newcastle and the Upper Parishes would support him. All four of the old members had done the best they could for the County each in his own way, so, no doubt, each was trying hard to be again returned.

In reply to Mr. Creaghan Mr. Gillespie said he was on no ticket, but Mr. Hutchison and himself were willing to act with any other two to promote the welfare of the County.

Some persons in the audience here made the mistake that the ADVANCE had that morning referred to Hutchison, Gillespie, Troy and Bruce as "the people's ticket" and asked Mr. Gillespie if that statement was his authority; Mr. Gillespie said he was on no ticket and had no authority further than he had indicated.

[What this questioner referred to was the following paragraph in the ADVANCE,—"Vote locally for the four best men, who are opposed to the Local Government—Hutchison, Gillespie, Troy and Bruce."]

The editor of the ADVANCE here rose and stated that he alone was responsible for that paragraph, which simply asked for support of gentlemen because they were opposed to the Government.

Just here, we think it right to explain that Mr. Gillespie, on Wednesday evening, last, stated that he would support Mr. Bruce and three or four other gentlemen, of whom the editor of the ADVANCE was asked to allow himself to be placed on a ticket composed of HUTCHISON, GILLESPIE, TROY and BRUCE, and he distinctly agreed that he would oppose the present Government or any reconstruction of it. The question was put to him,—"Will you insist on this Government being voted out of office and some gentleman, not your number of it, being put upon by the Lieutenant-Governor to form a new Government?" His reply was,—"I will."

He then agreed to go with the other three candidates—all together in one double horse team—next day to canvas Glenora and Hardwick as members of the opposition ticket. He did not go, however, and on Saturday he was seen in the office of the editor of the ADVANCE, he said he was afraid the arrangement might lose him certain votes and he did not like to keep it so strictly, in reply to the question,—"But why do you deny having made the arrangement?"—he said, "I don't deny it; it was all right, I thought, at first, for you all know that I am opposed to the Government."

Last week we thought that although Mr. Gillespie had done wrong—had stultified himself before men who desired to give him a disinterested hearing and to hear his word as that of an honorable man—we would still support him on his declaration that he was opposed to the Government. After his nomination day definition of his position, however, he cannot expect any man of principle to vote for him. We are sorry that public duty obliges us to say this. Personally, we wish Mr. Gillespie well, but politically, he is not to be trusted until he has reformed and recognizes the duty of having some regard for his pledged word to electors.—MR. TROY next took the platform. After referring to the fact that it was not of his own seeking that he was a candidate at the present time, but because he had been invited to enter the contest with others that he was before the electors, he said objection had been made to him because he was a young and comparatively unknown man—coming, as he did from the lumber walks of life without other great business reputation or high social distinction to recommend him. But humble origin was no bar to a man in this country and it was the privilege of all to strive for the highest public honors. The present was one of the times when, with the dissolution of the Legislature of the country, we were all politically reduced to one level and each had the right to enter the lists for the honors, which were within the control and bestowal of the people. He was but a plain man, a farmer—belonging to a class more important, perhaps, than any other in the country and, as such, they had a right to fuller representation than they had yet secured. It was true that they had forced themselves forward towards the position they were entitled to in the councils of the country and were still pressing up for their rightful place, recognizing the fact that agriculture was the foremost and most essential industrial interest of the country and that it had been too long kept in the background. He believed the lawyers had always been pretty fully represented in the Legislature. There were fourteen of them among the forty-one members of the last House and they formed two-thirds of the Government. He had a high opinion of the legal profession, because it had given many eminent and distinguished men to the world, but he did not think lawyers should have such a large share in the representation of the people.

He had declared his opposition to the Government, strongly and most positively, but no more strongly than he had heard of the "ADVANCE" Scientific Miscellany.

A Prussian manufacturer has found that treating the woods with ozone greatly adds to the durability of pianos used in warm climates.

Fort Rice, in British America, has been chosen as a British Government station in the chain of circum-polar scientific observations. The Swedes have selected a site for their station at Wylde Bay, in West Spitzbergen.

A newly-proposed plan for the ventilation of tunnels is the use of chemicals for absorbing the impurities of the air. A "chemical lung," based upon this principle, has been put to a satisfactory test in London by a number of scientists.

The sorrowful tree—so named because it flourishes only at night—grows upon the island of Goa, near Bombay. The flowers, which have a fragrant odor, appear soon after sunset the year round, and close up or fall off as the sun rises.

Prof. F. A. Abel considers it doubtful whether coal-dust in mines can cause extensive explosions in the complete absence of fire-damp, but only a very small proportion of fire-damp is necessary to make the presence of the dust extremely dangerous.

After a recent violent storm on the English coast a quantity of saline matter was observed on windows at a distance inland. The deposit is believed to have been made by ocean spray, which in this case must have been blown by the wind at least sixty miles.

When ocean cables are raised so many of the crabs, corals, sponges and other inhabitants of the ocean bottom are drawn up with the cable. It is suggested that dredging, of which it is hoped some competent naturalist may take advantage.

An important fact noticed by Dr. Koch in his work on the tubercle bacillus, which has been found to exist in all tissues affected by tuberculosis or consumption, is that they are unaffected by neutral substances or strong mineral acids. This peculiarity teaches that alkaline solutions, which are used to destroy the parasites, are to be used for disinfection and as remedies for consumption.

Mr. St. George Sanson predicts that the incandescent electric lamps will soon altogether supersede the arc lights now so rapidly coming into general use for lighting streets and large areas. He thinks the danger to life from contact with the wires used for electric lighting purposes may be overcome by using low tension currents which are harmless. As to fire risks, he believes that they can only arise from gross carelessness.

The attempt made by the Belgians to introduce the Indian elephant into Central Africa has not been successful. The three elephants taken by the expedition have died, but it is believed that this result has been caused by insufficient food and excessive work. This experiment is, therefore, not regarded as conclusive, and further efforts will doubtless be made to use the Indian elephant as a beast of burden in Africa colonization.
