TEMPERANCE AND THE TREATY. The fact that the Ontario prohibitionists

and the Ontario wine growers were the principal objectors to the ratification of the French treaty-which fact, in its entirety, Montreal Witness and the Religious Intelligencer—has received a great deal of attention from United States papers, which designate it as remarkable. It is not, however, an incongruous thing that the prohibitionists should object to the treaty, not because it would injure the liquor traffic at large, but because it would not. It is a remarkable fact that many temperance people are often misled by their very anxiety to stop the manufacture of liquor. There were many good people who did not see how the Scott Act could possibly be a failure; temperance people in some parts of the States have condemned the Gothenburg system without a hearing; there are many Canadians who do not at all consider the difficulties of enforcing a prohibitory law now in a country like Canada, with such a large coast line and such a vast stretch of frontier; there are others in certain towns who boast that they have driven liquor into the dives—the worst possible places for it—as if they, had done the next thing to absolute prohibition. It cerwas first brought to public notice by the Montreal Witness and the Religious Inteinext thing to absolute prohibition. It cer- Since Napoleon died on the island of St. tainly does not seem, as long as people are Helena, the death-rate there has largely exbound to drink wine, that it makes much difference, other things being equal, where the wine is made; and the prohibitionists should remember that when the country is ready for a prohibitory law the tratty. is ready for a prohibitory law, the treaty, as less. That the noise is made by the bird's voice is impossible; and "Anxious Inquirer's" latest information seems also to be erroneous, because of the fact just mentioned. The most reasonable explanation of the drumming is that the bird makes it by beating with its wings not the log, or the stone, or the groundbut, with a peculiar "in-curve," the air, after the fashion of the great American eagle.

not appear to be dying out, at any rate. But there is a reason therefor. Uncle Sam is anteing another million dollars in payment for the Cherokee strip. The act of con gress relating to this distribution provided that every Cherokee man, woman or infant living on March 1, 1894, should receive his pro rata of the seven millions of dollarsdue to the tribe, the infants, parts going to the parents as trustees. Over three thousand Cherokee babies were born in the eighteen months preceding last March. This averages a birth to every married coup-le in the nation. And moreover, there has been no trouble in regard to the neglect of parents to register the birth of their off- the need of forbearance. An examination of the list showed that the name of W. D. BRECKINRIDGE was not on it. The peculiar ideas of the eminent Cincinnati Mason in regard to "that word, 'honor,' " seem to presuppose that he was once an intimate friend of Breckingings.

Whatever may be the custom of English sportsmen, the action of the "Britannia" in sailing over the course alone and taking ing yacht was disabled so that it was not possible for her to take part in a race, does not seem to be becoming to the gentleman who owns her, especially as the "Vigilant" has not been victorious quite as often as the "Britannia." The opinions of great men in regard to whether this year will be election year are of especial interest. VERSES OF YESTERDAY AND TODAY Cherry Carols.

I. THE MONTH OF CHERRIES. This is the right state of mand for July:
Sit in a hammock and gaze in the sky,
Inhaling the edor of wild roses nigh;
Hear the bees hum and the soft zephyrs sigh.
What matter if out of the branches on high A smiling black cherry drops right in your And you cry:
"Oh, my mouth—not my eye—
Is the place for a cherry in July!"

II. CHERRIES RIPE.

Down in Digby where the cherries Gratify the sun;
When the branches chirp and clatter,
Robins calling, "what's the matter?"
Then we have the fun.
No two bites of one then make we,
Lest some dear heart here forsake me,
Half just equals none.

Drop them down; for "Massachusette Red and tempting, that's the kind; How they love to laugh and caper, When Miss Venus lights her taper, We two itsish all we find. Cherry cheeks have capers too, That of course is nothing new, Windows are not blind.

Down in Digby where the cherries Turn their faces round; Loving voices call us nigh them, What do we but kindly try them, Where the best are found. When the trees our laps are filling, With their red fruit ever willing; Cherry talks abound.

Bipe and merry dimpled cherry,
Boughs will soon be bare;
Soon will empty leaves be waving,
We our dimes must now be saving,
Fandy ferry has a face.
Won't the parting fwilight kiss us,
Won't the old trees sigh and miss us,
Shall we all be here next year?
