The prices of $7.75 a ton and $10.25 a ton are considerably lower than is now being generally paid on the market it was said. The contention was that the abnormal demand for bituminous coal has produced a situation which increased production and a complete supply but the wiping out process probably will not go lower than the prices quoted. Hard Coal Higher. In so far as anthractic coal is concerned, there is a trank suspicion here that the consumers are to face another boost in the near future. This is admitted to be purely speculative, but middle the purely speculative, but middle to be purely speculative	51 6 6
