LINE FENCES.

A has a farm of 175 acres, all cleared, and the line fence at back of lot of 160 rods, is between A and B Co. Can A compel B Co. to put up its share of line fence? The said company has been selling timber off its lot every winter, and making good returns for the land.

Ans.—From the statement of the case, it would appear that the lands owned by the company are not "occupied lands," within the meaning of "The Line Fences Act" (R. S. O., 1897, Ch. 284), and that the company cannot at present be compelled to put up, or maintain, any part of the line fence.

RAISING WATER FROM SPRING

I have a flowing spring about 50 rods from my barn; down a hill, about 20 feet lower than my barn.

1. Would it be possible to drive the water from spring to barn, having the windmill on the barn to pump the water up the hill into a tank?

2. If so, what is the best kind of piping to get?

W. F. I.

Ans.—It might be possible, but it would be very difficult to raise water that distance and height by suction. It might be done by jerk rods, if the "lay" of the ground were suitable; but the most satisfactory plan would be to put up a separate mill at the spring and force the water to the tank at barn, which can be done if the situation is such as to catch enough wind to drive the mill. Where there is sufficient head of water to drive a hydraulic ram, that is a most efficient plan of raising water. In case of pumping by a mill at the spring, a one-inch galvanized-iron pipe would carry the stream; but an 1 1/2-inch pipe would make a better job, though costing more.

A ROUND WOODEN SILO.

I intend to build a silo this summer. Will it do to build a round silo, fourteen feet in diameter and twenty-four feet high, and will 2x4-inch hemlock scantling do for stays, or what size would you recommend for stays? How thick would the cement floor need to be, and how far apart should the iron hoops be placed? What size iron would it need to be? Will the iron hoops need to be in one or two pieces. Will it require three doors, or will one door in the bottom do to take out the food?

Ans.—No doubt in the back files of "The Farmer's Advocate" there are numerous articles on building stave silos. I would also refer your inquirer to Bulletin 35 of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, which can be obtained by sending a post card to the Director. I think the dimensions mentioned for this silo should be satisfactory. Hemlock, pine and spruce are all recommended for stave silos, and I cannot say which has proved the most desirable. Two-inch material will answer, and while the staves need not be more than four inches wide, at the same time wider material would answer, say six- or eight-inch stuff. For floor in the bottom, an ordinary cement floor would answer, made of about three inches of heavy grouting in the bottom, and about one-half inch of what is called facing, or a finishing coat made of screened sand and cement on the top. The iron hoops should be put close together at the bottom, but may be placed wider apart near the top. The bottom hoop should be within four or five inches of the bottom of the silo, and the second one, say eighteen inches above the bottom, the next one two feet from the second, and the fourth one three feet from the third, the next two hoops about four feet apart, and the remainder about four and a half feet. Three-quarter-inch iron should answer the purpose for the hoops, and they will be found more easily handled if made in two pieces. There should be doors put in the side of the silo at intervals of about four feet so as to facilitate taking out silage.

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS SAVED HER LIFE

Mrs. John C. Yensen, Little Rocher, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with a stab-like pain through my heart. I tried many remedies, but they seemed to do me more harm than good. I was then advised by a friend to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and after using two boxes I was completely cured. I cannot praise them enough for the world of good they did for me, for I believe they saved my life."
