"A millionaire," said Dr. Brady, "lay dying. He has lived a life of which, as he now looked back on it, he felt none too proud. To the minister at his bedside he muttered weakly:

"If I leave a thousand or so to the church will my salvation be assured?"

"The minister answered cautiously:

"I wouldn't like to be positive, but it's well worth trying."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

SWAMP LAND FOR CELERY.

I have here a piece of what may be termed bottom land, black muck on clay bottom. In places it is very wet, owing to springs, no doubt. There is a good fall of the ground for drainage. Would this be favorable to the growing of celery? My object in writing is to get reliable information, practical or theoretical, or both, which would guide me in the matter.

S. P.

Ans.—It is impossible to do more than give general directions in the case you mention. If the soil is deep and rich, and can be thoroughly drained, it should produce good crops of celery, and may also produce other garden crops, such as cabbage, cauliflower, and onions.

With regard to reclaiming and clearing up such land, the first thing to do would be to cut off all the brush and tree growth, root out the stumps, and burn over; then thoroughly drain the land. The draining may be done first by means of open ditches, and finally by tile under-drains. For the first year or two it would be well to grow some crop which feeds upon rank vegetable matter in such soil. For this purpose oats or corn, or even a crop of potatoes, might be grown.

TIME TO PRUNE CEDAR HEDGE

What is the proper time to trim a hedge of cedar; hedge is about five years old?

P. D.

Ans.—An evergreen hedge should be pruned but once during the year, and that early in the spring, before growth commences. In pruning such a hedge it must be remembered that the trees have no dormant buds the same as deciduous trees, hence if they are cut back to where the leaves appear, no new growth will be thrown out. In trimming, therefore, some of last year's growth should always be left. Close heading back at the top may tend to fill up the lower branches, but where the trees have become old and the branches are dead, there is no possibility of starting new growth in the lower branches. The best plan to adopt is to begin trimming when the hedge is young, and follow it up from year to year, so as to keep the growth dense at the bottom.

For an excellent book on hedges, I would refer you to a little work, "Hedges and Wind-breaks," by E. C. Powell, published by the Orange-Judd Co., New York.

BLIGHT OF MELONS.

1. Will spraying prevent blight on watermelon and muskmelon vines; if so, what should be used and how often, etc.?

2. Will spraying tomato vines prevent the tomatoes from rotting?

E. C.

Ans.—1. The disease commonly known as "blight" which affects cucumbers, melons, and watermelons, is caused by a fungus known as Downy Mildew. It makes its appearance first on the older leaves of the vine, and spreads rapidly toward the tip of the vine. As the fungus lives within the tissues of the plant, there is no remedy after the vines have once become inoculated, but the disease may be largely prevented by thorough spraying with Bordeaux mixture, made up of four pounds of copper sulphate, four pounds of lime, and forty gallons of water. This should be applied early in the season, as soon as the plants begin to make growth, and should be repeated at intervals of ten days or two weeks. The more thoroughly the application can be made to the under side of the leaves, the better.

2. The rot of the tomato may also be prevented by thorough spraying with Bordeaux mixture, the same way as recommended for melon vines. Much can be done to prevent the spread of these diseases by destroying all affected vines and fruits as early as possible in the season, and practicing a rotation of crops in which no one of these crops will closely follow another.
