Paris, Nov. 22.—Mr. Patrick Egan has Paris, Nov. 22.—Mr. Patrick Egan has addressed a letter to the Treasurer of the Home Rule league at Dublin, in reply to its recent circular. In his letter Mr. Egan, while reminding Home Rulers that he himself is one of them, deprecates their idea of attempting to revive and extend their movement at the present juncture by the formation of local associations. He protests against the opening passages of the circular, which he said would appear to imply that the land legislation of the Government had given satisfaction to the Irish people. Mr. Egan ironically asks the League why they did not think of local associations eight vears ago, and savs that the country in its desire for independence has outraged Home Rule in its present form, and so long as Messrs. Parnell, Davitt, Dillon and their s. Parnell, Davitt, Dillon and their s are in prison the revival of the Home Rule agitation must be untimely and prejudicial to the interests of Ire-

London, Nov. 23.—The Times says it is London, Nov. 23.—The Times says it is only too plain, that after the brief interval of hesitation, considerable sections of the people of Ireland have decided to adhere to the policy of the "no rent" manifesto. A plan of dealing with recalcitrant tenants, county by county, has been adopted in Leitrim and Cavan, where two flying columns of 500 soldiers each, and the police, have been detailed for protecting those engaged in carrying out the laws. In many places it is notorious that to pay rent at all is as dangerous as it was some time back not to pay more than Griffith's valuation. The cattle of a par-ish priest have been mutilated because owner denounced the Kilmainham If we have to deal with a horoughly disaffected, disloyal population, of whom the tenant formers and their families do not form over half, it is idle to expect order to be restored by holding out a hope of a general reduction in rents. The means at the disposal of the Government are boundless, and they are backed by the resolute spirit of the whole people of Great Britain. If the existing powers of the Executive are in-adequate others must be granted. One thing only is impossible, that Ireland should be delivered over to a lawless faction, openly aiming at the disruption of the Union. The article is based on tele-grams from correspondents detailing numerous outrages, such as firing by an armed party into the house of Lord Bess-borough's agent at Pillotown, the house being only twenty yards from the police barracks. Several other cases of firing into houses, all within the last few days, meendiary fires in Galway and Kings Counties, and placarding notices with bullets attached, threatening death to rent payers. The seriousness of the situation is shown by the Dublin Freeman's Journal earnestly imploring the people not to give the executive excuse for further coercive action. The people are becoming daily more satisfied with the workings of the Land Law, and agreements between land-lords and tenants without going into the court are very frequent.

New York. Nov. 20.-O'Connor, Sheehy

They say the reports that Ireland has been lulled by the Land Act are false. The lull is but the preparation for a storm. They are advised that in the vast majority of cases rent has not been paid. They say the Chicago demonstration ought to give a word of doom to the twin curses of Irish life, Irish landlords and English domination.

The princess, while on the Mount of Olives, lived in complete solitude, doing good among the poor of Jerusalem, and helping to send their children to school.

The sensational news was published in Rome a few days ago that the Corinthian capital of one of the great columns on the facade of St. Peter's had fallen. It turned out, however, to be only one of the inner double volutes, but so colossal are they that in falling it extensively fractured the pavement, and the fragments were sufficient to fill four carts. The damage, which is not recognizable until pointed out, was caused by the effect of time and the weather having loosened the piece of travertine of which it was formed.

A WIDOW'S MITE.

The celebrated Abbe Bauer relates the following touching incident:
Some years ago, when I was about to make my first pilgrimage to Rome, a poor country-woman from one of the eastern provinces of France handed me a sum of money which she requested me to take noney which she requested me to take along and deliver myself to the Holy Father. I was surprised that a woman who, to judge by her appearance, was very poor could dispose of a sum of money so considerable for one in her circumstances. and I felt impelled to question her as to the manner in which she had come into s possession. She answered simply:

"These are my little savings."
"How old are you, my good woman?" then asked. "I do not know exactly, but I think I must be over fifty."

"How long has it taken you to gather tl is amount together."
"Oh, quite a length of time! I have been working with strangers since I was eleven

"What did you intend to do with this money before you heard of the needs of the Holy Father?" "I intended it to support me in my old

"And what will you do now?"
"I will work on as before."
"But if you should fall sick?" "I will go to the hospital."

When I related this conversation to the Holv Father, I saw—and I never shall forget it—on that noble face on which the terrors of the revolution and the threats of the powers of earth could produce no signs of weakness or discouragement, two great tears glistening. Pius IX took his seal ring, the Ring of the Fisherman, and laying it on the aims of the poor woman, said with emotion: "I should be without a morsel of bread before I could appropriate this holy offering to my own use."

What waves of tears surge o'er the deep Of sorrow, in our restless souls! And they are strong, not weak, who weep, Those drops from out the sea that rolls Within their hearts forevermore; Without a dept! —without a shore. But ah! the tears that are not wept,

The tears that never outward fall; The tears that grief for years has kept Within us—they are best of all: The tears our eyes shall never know, Are dearer than the tears that flow. Each night upon earth's flowers below,
The dew comes down from darkest skies;
And every night our tears of woe
Go up like dews to Paradise,

Flow on, ye tears! and bear me home; Flow no!! ye tears of deeper woe; Flow on, ye tears! that are but foam Of deeper waves that will not flow. A little while—I reach the shore Where tears flow not forevermore!

CATHOLIC PRESS.

Catholic Standard JULES FERRY has evidently got his reward, after the tashion in which the devil always pays his servants. He overthrew the conservative re-public of Thiers and Marshall Mac-Mahon; he expelled the Religious Orders from France, and paved the way for the ascendancy of Gambetta; and now Gambetta and his cordjutors contemptuously thrust him aside, without so much as thanking him for his help. A PRESBYTERIAN "Synod" in one of the Western States, learning that some of its members were sending their children to Catholic schools, adopted some flaming condemnatory preambles and resolutions. The following extracts will serve as a speci-is the result of honest and sincere though erroneous convictions. But it is plain that the men who passed these resolutions were governed not by their convictions, but by their prejudices. If they believed that the Romish Church was "apostate and anti-Christ," they would have done more than simply "deprecate" sending Presbyterian children to Catholic schools. Evidently they do not believe it; they do not even dare to say that they themselves believe it. They take refuge in the statement that "the standards of Presbyterianism" so regard the "Romish Church." "Standards of Presbyterianism," who cares, Presbyterian or not, what those "standards" say? They are professedly fallible, and it has become usual among Presbyterians themselves to refer to them with undisguised contempt.

The "disposition" will continue to increase, as the resolutions above quoted state it is increasing, among Presbyterians and other Protestants to send their children to Catholic schools, because Presbyterian parents know, as others also know, that in Catholic schools their children will be more vigilantly guarded from vicious influences, and their morals be more carefully looked after, than they will be or can be in any non-Catholic schools.

"WHAT can Catholics who are constantly invoking their Saints,' triumphantly asks a Protestant exchange, "make of Paul's declaration, There is one mediator between God and men, the Man Jesus Christ.' What can Catholics make of St.
