What I desire that others should not do or me I equally desire not to do for them. Without the virtue of humility one can seither be honest in poverty nor contented

The wealth of a man is the number of things that he loves and blesses, that he is loved and blessed by.

Men are not so ungrateful as they are said to be. If they are often complained of, it generally happens that the benefoctor exacts more than he has given. When Lycurgus was asked by some one who came to consult him about the State, where true reform should begin, he replied "Sir, it should begin in your own house," Liberality, courtesy, benevolence, unsel-It is when a woman tries to whistle that the great glory of her mouth is seen without being heard very much.

"When shall I call you in the morning, sir?" asked a hotel waiter of an Aberdonian one night. He replied pawkily, "I'll ring the bell when I wish to be called." fishness, under all circumstances and toward all men—these qualities are to the world what the linchpin is to the rolling chariot.

"There are people who live behind the hill," is an old German proverb which means that there are other people in the world besides yourself, although you may not see them.

some one who knows an about it says that "to ride a velocipede successfully a young man should see that his hair is carefully parted in the middle, having no more on one side than on the other, in the way of balance." Man's passions are like the ocean's waves. Even when they sleep, the watcher knows that the half-hushed sigh is but the wailing of the storm that has passed. If we would have powerful minds, we must think; if we would have faithful Talking about nerve - real, downright nerve--there's a young fellow who can toss a waiter his last $5 bill in payment for a couple of creams, take the lady out to her carriage, put her in, stand smiling on the curbstone till she turns the corner—and then go heal to deven the inches the lady out to her carriage. hearts, we must love; if we would have strong muscles, we must labor. These in-clude all that is valuable in life.

The world never harms a Christian so long as he keeps it out of his heart. Temptation is never dangerous until it has an inside accomplice. Sin within betrays the heart to the outside assailant. Lint, man, lint; put on plenty of lint. Or hold a cold door key to the back of your neck, press a small roll of paper under the end of your lip and hold up your left arm. This last remedy is to be used only in case your heart bleeds at the nose.—Hawkey. When a mean and contemptible character assumes to teach others, he only creates disgust. He is as impotent to form public sentiment, as he is to elevate himself in pubic estimation. When you have anything to communicate that will distress the heart of the person whom it concerns, be silent in order that he may hear it from some one else. O, nightingale! bring thou the glad tidings of spring and leave bad news to the owl. Mr. Warner, a respectable and law abid-ing citizen of Baker street, Detroit, rode home in an express wagon the other day, having a hand fire extinguisher and Man's love to his God is like the hanging sand; His is like the solid rock. Man's love is like the passing meteor with its fitful gleam; His is like the fixed stars, shining far above, clear and serene from age to age in their own changeless firmament.

"What's that? Why, that's a fire extinguisher—best thing you ever saw—meant to have got one a year ago."

"Jacob, you are always making a fool of yourself," she continued as she shut the door. "Every patent right man gets around you as a cat lays for a mouse."

"Does, eh? If you know anything at all, you'd know that every store and office in Detroit has one o' these. They've saved lots of buildings and may save ours. "You throw it at the fire, don't you?" she asked in a sarcastic tones.

He carried it up stairs into a closet without replying, and she followed on and asked:

"Does it shoot a fire out?"

"Does it shoot a fire out?"

"If you don't know anything I'll learn you something! It is full of chemicals; you strike on this knob on top, and she's all ready to open this faucet and play on the fire."

"She grinned as she walked around it and finally asked:

"Do you get a horse to draw it round?"

"No, I don't get a horse to draw it round?"

"No, I don't get a horse to draw it full servant. Receive the crown prepared for you from all eternity." From the spiritual birth to a happy death, the chain is one of love, one long line of graces and it behooves us to hold fast to each of the links, as they pass through our life's hands. here it is on my back."

"I see it is," she sneered.

"And can't I run to any part of the house with it?" he demanded. See—

It is not gold or goods that make a man wealthy. The best wealth is of the heart, an enlightened mind, a loyal conscience, pure affections. He is wealthiest who has the largest stock of wisdom, virtue and love, whose heart beats with warm sympathy for his fellow-man, who finds good in all seasons, all men. The generous man who pities the unfortunate, the poor man who orders well his life, the loving man who clings closely to his family and friends er, bumping and jamming, began to shoot off its charge of chemicals.

"You old—!" she started to say, when a stream from the nozzle struck her between the eyes, and she didn't finish.

"What in—o-u-c-h!" roared Mr. Warner as he wat a dosy in the say. the studious man who seeks instruction in all things, are the truly wealthy men.

A DEVOTED MOTHER.

During the prevalence of the plague in Italy, a poor woman living in the village of Careggi, the wife of a laborer and the mother of two little boys, felt herself attacked by the fatal disease. It was during the absence of her husband, who worked at a distance, and only returned on Saturday night. Frightened by a neighboring family, which It was a sad house when these two highly respectable cld people got so that they could use their eyes, and discuss matters calmly. And she doubled up her fist and hoarsely said:

"Take that investigator or distinguisher or whatever you call it, back down town and tell everybody that you are a lunatic."

And he said:
