"B" PLATOON

AN S. M. KILLED
 One regrettable incident occurred, one of our sergeant-majors went out on a scouting party, got killed by one of our own men. It is a general rule here to shoot first and challenge afterwards. Their snipers were busy all the time. We lost about 8 men that way, and we determined to give them no rest, so we kept them jumping right down to a big wood at the night and day all the time. Has been used for their working parties at night and sniping during the day. One morning about 3 a.m., a German band played over in their lines. I don't think our artillery could locate them, if they had, it would have been "good-bye band."

IN GOOD SHAPE
 The trenches were in good shape, and the communication trenches led right down to a big wood at the night and day all the time. The place was pretty well battered out, still some of the people lived there. An old lady 70 years of age was killed by a shell one afternoon while I was down there.

The woods I mentioned before is a pretty place. When the artillery stops for a little while you can hardly realize there is a war on, everything is so nice and green, and the shells have hardly done any damage to the trees. There are three grave yards, all fixed up by the soldiers and kept in good shape. Every day the crosses get more numerous. (The war claims its toll.) I believe we are all going to have an eight-days pass to England. Just those who are left of the old battalion, and very few of us are here now—mostly killed and wounded.

I believe you had one of my letters in the paper. I never saw it myself, so I don't know which one it is. I have seen so many published by fellows that have never been within five miles of the firing line, that it fairly makes me sick to read them. That was why I asked you in the first place not to publish any of mine. That was the only reason. All I have written is actual facts and what I have seen myself.

Well, I guess I will have to finish up now. We expect to go back into the trenches again in a couple of days and I have so many to write to, so will close with my very best respects to all, and may God bless you all. I am,

Yours faithfully,
 France, July 10th, 1915.
 NEXT DAY.
 I have just received your letter of August 28th so take the pleasure of answering it. We have been here four weeks and am now packed up, ready for another move to the front. We were here for a long rest after eight days in the trenches, but however, we can't foresee events, and I find it best to take things as they come and plod along night and day.

COURIER AGAIN.
 Well, Ernest, the Courier was rather boosting me up. That was the first time I had seen the letter. Another one of my letters was published in a London paper and also read in one of the schools. Strange to say I received a letter from a lady in London asking me to find out particulars of her brother who was in the Winnipeg Rifles and has been missing for several weeks.

CHARLTON'S DEATH.
 As regards Claud Charlton, I knew him very well and can give you particulars. It was while we were in reserve and suffering from heavy shell fire. (It was either the 26th or 27th of April.) We were along the Yser canal, dug in. A sharp bullet near him and wounded him so badly that he died shortly afterwards. He lies buried in a small town called Vlamertinghe in Belgium. I know the place well. The last time we passed through there, the Red Cross were using the church adjoining the cemetery as a dressing station. The Germans shelled the church so much that they had to get out of it, and several of the wounded were killed. This is only one of the tricks of the war.

NO WINTER CAMPAIGN.
 You asked me in your letter my opinion as to how soon the war would be over. It is the general opinion that there will be no winter campaign. I, too, trust we will be finished before the cold weather comes on. It was had enough in the months of February and March, up to your knees in mud all the time. We used to do four days in and four days out then, but now we do eight or ten at a time. It's a great strain on a man's nerves.

WANTS SIMPLE.
 I must thank you very much for your kind offer to send me anything needed. My wants are very small here. I rub along from day to day, sometimes plenty to eat, other times nothing—just according to the weather. I am in the line of the government supplies us with an abundance of tobacco, and I find it a good thing in the trenches. It seems to soothe one's nerves and occupies the mind.

Well, I don't know whether I told you my last letter, but we are giving us eight days pass to England. I am not in a hurry to go myself just yet. My mother is very low and I am expecting to get a cable any day calling me to London. She has been an invalid for nearly eight years, and I just lately had two strokes, so I wouldn't like to go now, and when I was wanted not to be able to return.

I guess I must now close this letter as we are expecting to move off at any time. I don't know if we are going back in the trenches again or into billets. We just get the order to move but are never told where, if
