read the other day that it cost five thousand dollars to bring up a city boy and educate him well. I said to myself: "That is because everything in the city has to be bought and living is high." But I began to study the thing, and I found out that even a country boy costs his parents a good deal.

When you count what a boy eats and what he wears, and the school books he has to have, and the doctor's bills that have to be paid when he gets the measles or the scarlet fever, he will cost his folks at home at least one hundred dollars a year. If a boy is pretty bad to smash things or to kick his shoes right out, he costs more than that. So when I am twenty-one and old enough to do for myself, I shall have cost father more than two thousand dollars.

The increase in weight depends upon the age of the baby, also the food.

An infant under six months should from four to eight ounces a gain from four to eight ounces a week; from six to twelve months, not quite so much. Children fed on prepared foods gain more rapidly in flesh but are not as vigorous in other ways.

After three months a baby may be considered ready for short clothes. If the weather should be a little cool, the weather should be a little cool, keep the feet and legs warmly clothed, and do not make the skirts doe short; make them just long enough to reach the feet. Every healthy child needs to have free use of its arms and legs, and these members would be stronger and develop more rapidly if babies were set so hampered with long and heavy chirts. Anecdotal.

that he never has been interviewed, and declares that in the last seven years but one interviewer ever has been able to approach him. This was on a recent trip to Europe, when a repre-sentative of the London "Times" would not take "No" for his answer. "Tell the 'Times' man my time is worth ten pounds a minute," at last said Morgan. "The 'Times' man says he'll take two minutes at that," came back the reply. The interviewer handed Mr. Morgan twenty pounds, talked just two min-utes by both their watches, did all the talking himself, and rose to go on the instant. "Why did you want to see power is unique, for its composition expresses the highest medical progress of the age. Polson's Nerviline is a true comfort in the family for in all me?" Morgan asked in curiosity. I wagered one hundred pounds that I would interview you personally, that's lated him on his enterprise, and dis-missed him within the third minute of all" was his reply. Lincoln, even as a young man, was always ready and resourceful on the platform. In the new book, Lincoln in Story, it is related that in 1836 Lincoln made a telling speech in an election campaign for the State Legislature of George Forquer, an old and respected citizen, who had changed his party, and almost simultaneously had peen appointed to a fat office by his new friends, was present. Just at this time Mr. Forquer had completed the finest house in Springfield and over it erected a lightning-rod, the first in that region. At the conclusion of Lincoln's peech, Forquer took it upon himself to reply, commencing thus: "This young man will have to be taken down, and I am sorry the task devolves upon me." He then proceeded to answer Lincoln's argument in an able and fair but patronizing manner. At length Forquer ended and Lincoln had the floor to re-"The gentleman has seen fit," said "to allude to my being a young man, but he forgets that I am older in years than in the tricks and trades of politicians.
