expressing his political views and experiences Colonel Roose-velt's pen is a trenchant one. Here are some extracts from his political essays and lectures which demonstrate the truth of that which demonstrate the truth of that statement, are fair samples of his style and also show the trend of the man's mind pretty clearly:

"I wish to preach, not the doctrine of ignoble ease, but the doctrine of the strenuous life; the life of toil and effort, of labor and strife; to preach that highest form of success which mere easy peace, but to the man who does not shrink from hardship, or from bitter toil, and who, out of these, wins the splendid, ultimate triumph." - Speech at the Hamilton Club, Chicago,

April, 1899. "The successful man, whether in business or politics, who has risen by conscienceless swindling of his neighbors, by deceit and chicanery, by unscrupulous boldness and unscrupulous cunning, stands toward society as a dangerous wild beast. The mean and cringing admiration which such a career commands among those who think crookedly or not at all makes this kind of success perhaps the most dangerous of all the influences that threaten our national life. Our standard of public and private conduct will never be raised to the proper level until we make the scoundrel who succeeds feel the weight of a hostile public opinion even more strongly than the scoundrel who fails."— "Latitude and Longitude Among Reformers."

"Money is a good thing. It is a fool-ish affectation to deny it. But it is not the only good thing, and after a cer-tain amount has been amassed it ceases to be the chief even of material good things. It is far better, for instance, to do well a bit of work which is well worth doing."—Speech to Young Men, December 31st, 1900.

"Practical politics must not be construed to mean dirty politics. In the long run the politics of fraud and treachery and foulness are unpractical politics, and the most practical of all politicians is the politician who is clean and decent and upright. But a man who goes into the actual battles of the political world must prepare himself much as he would for the struggle in any other branch of our life. He must be prepared to meet men of far lower ideals than his own, and to face things, not as he would wish them, but as they are. He must not lose his own high ideal, and yet he must face the fact that the majority of the men with whom he must work have lower ideals. He must stand firmly for what he believes, and yet he must realize that political action, to be effective, must be the joint action of many men, and that he must sacrifice somewhat of his own opinions to those of his associates if he ever hopes to see his desires take practical shape. "The prime thing that every man who takes an interest in politics should remember is that he must act and not merely criticize the actions of others. It is not the man who sits by his fireside reading his evening paper and saying how bad our politics and our politicians are who will ever do anygoes out into the rough hurly-burly of the caucus, the primary and political meeting, and there faces his fellows on

'Of all the forces that tend for evil in a great city like New York probably none are so potent as the sensational papers. Until one has had experience with them it is difficult to realize the reckless indifference to truth or lecency displayed by papers such as the two that have the largest circulation in New York city. Scandal forms the breath of the nostrils of such papers and they are quite as ready to create as to describe it. To sustain law and order is humdrum, and does not really lend itself to flaunting wood-cuts; but if the editor will stoop, and make his subordinates stoop, to raking the gutters of human depravity, to upholding the wrongdoer and furiously assailing what is upright and honest, he can make money, just as other types of pander make it. The man who is to do honorable work in any form of civic politics must make up his mind (and if he is a man of properly robust character he will make it up without difficulty) to treat the assaults of papers like these with absolute indifference and to go his way unheeding. Indeed, he will have to make up his mind to be criticized, sometimes justly and more often unjustly, even by decent people, and he must not be so thin-skinned as to mind such criti-cism overmuch."

Public Peculation in Latin Countries.

A well-known Italian diplomatist, who has only recently left London to exchange his post for a more important one, told me a couple of years ago that, with very few exceptions, Italian ministers—as distinct from diplomatists—all "feather their nests," or at least endeavor to do so. Consequently, when a Discoult of Consequently. when a Disraeli, a Guizot, or a Jules when a Disraell, a Guizot, or a Julea Simon dies poor, his poverty is not only accounted a wonder, but a virtue, by almost every French, Italian and Spanish journalist. To the very small number of statesmen of the so-called Latin nations thus distinguished must be added the name of Francesco Cris-pi. The fact of his demise in peculiarly straitened circumstances has been so prominently brought forward in France, Italy and Spain as to tempt English scribes still further to emphasize this rare, not to say extraordinary, evidence of the honesty of a great—or reputedly great-statesman of quasi-

Charles insisted that he had not even seen the jam. Papa thereupon was called in, and Charles was punished severely. Drawing Charles close to her, and wiping the tears from his eyes, mamma said: "When I was your age, my boy, I never told a falsehood." "How old were you before you began?" asked Charles, between sobs.—Albany "Jeurnal." Charles derived little good from his

Malt Breakfast Food FOR HEALTH RESUL'S

A breakfast grain food that fails to give health and strength to young and old, is dear at any price. While this is true, it is wonderful how habit and custom have so long led and deceived many worthy people.

The ordinary breakfast foods used by many such as oatmeal, cracked wheat, cornmeal and hominy, no doubt appease the pangs of hunger; their usefulness ends there. These foods instead of benefitting health, retard and impair digestion; they inflame the blood and lower vitality.

Malt Breakfast Food is a scientific health food; it is a concentrated health food.; it is a concentrated nourishment adapted for the strength-ening of young and old. Its delicious nutty flavor, its soothing effect on the stomach of the strong and weak, its energy producing virtues, all combine to make it a food of extraordinary value. Malt Breakfast Food sustains life for the sick when all other forms of nourishment are rejected. It ses away indigestion and stomach troubles, and creates a healthy appetite. As your grocer for it.

The more money a man has the harder it is for him to convince the world that he is a fool.

No matter how much a woman loves her husband, she can't help feeling respect for the judgment of a man who skilfully intimates her husband is not good enough for her.

A grain of sand in the eye can cause excruciating agony. A grain of pep-per in place of the grain of sand intensifies the torment. The pain is not confined to the organs affected. The whole body feels the shock of that little irritating particle. It is so when there is any derangement or disorder of the delicate womanly organs. The disorder may seem trivial but the whole body feels it. The nervous system is disordered. There are fretfulness, irritability, sullenness and depression of spirits. The general health of woman depends on the local health of the organs peculiarly feminine. Remove the drains, ulcerations, bearing down pains, and other afflictions of woman, and the whole body feels the benefit. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prewhole body feels the shock of that litbenefit. Anecdotal.

Not long ago a prominent country lawyer, becoming nettled at the ruling of a judge, picked up his hat and started to walk out of the court room. He was halted by the court with the enquiry: "Are you trying to express your contempt for the court?" "No, Your Honor," was the reply; "I am trying to conceal it."

A poor Scotchwoman lay dying, and her husband sat by her bedside. After a time the wife took her husband's hand and said: "John, we're goin' to part. I have been a gude wife to you, haven't I?" John thought a moment. "Well, just middling like, Jenny, you know," anxious not to say too much. Again the wife spoke. "John," she said Jaintly, "ye manu promise to bury me in the auld kirkyard at Str'avon beside my mither. I couldna rest in peace among unco' folk in the dirt and smoke o' Glasgow." "Weel, weel, Jenny, my woman," said John, soothingly, "we'll just try ye in Glasgie first, an' gin ye dinna be quiet we'll try ye in Str'avon."

It is related by an exchange that in a certain parish, the name of which is prudently withheld, the wife of a clergyman was mending clothes when a neighbor dropped in for a social chat. The visitor's attention was attracted to a large basket half-filled with buttons, and, carelessly fingering them, she suddenly remarked: "Why, here are two buttons exactly the same as those my husband had on his last winter suit!" "Indeed," said the clergyman's wife, "that is curious! All these buttons were found in the collection-basket, and I have saved them, thinking I might put them to use." After this the conversation languished, and very soon the visitor took her departure. But the story got abroad, and no more buttons were found in the basket.

Lemice Therieux once worked off a little practical joke at the expense of a play in which the Pelion of misery was heaped upon the Ossa of despair, says a writer in "Chambers' Journal." Druggists or by mail, from Polson & of several cases of dynamite. Full of fears of a wigging from headquarters, he telegraphed to the Sirdar: "Regret killing of ten laborers by dynamite accident." Then he set himself to await the reproof of his stern superior. In a few hours came laconic despatch: "Do you need any more dynamite?" A second story is as follows: While engaged in building a bridge for the advance upon Pretoria, an engineer officer, apprehensive of danger to his workmen, communicated his fears to Lord Kitchener, explaining that a different mode of construction would be much safer than the one employed, which might, indeed, cost the lives of twenty or thirty men. Kitchener listened patiently, and then asked: "How much longer would it take to do the work by this safer method?" "Not more than an hour longer, sir." "Very well; don't change the plans. You will continue the work as it has been begun."
