Scientific Slaughter Houses.

Paris, with her genius for organization, probably leads the world in her scientifically conducted slaughter houses. Almost perfect precautions for public safety are taken by means of the rigorous inspection of the meat by the police. There are two immense municipal abattoirs, and the charge for slaughtering, known as the "slaughter house tax," is 2 francs per hundred kilograms, or about $4.22 per ton, which the city sets aside to defray the cest of maintaining and repairing the abattoirs. In round numbers the city receives $760,000 a year.—Public Opiation. Scientific Slaughter Houses

"It is to Laugh"

By M. J. Phillips Copyright, 1906, by Beatrix Reade

Bob Wentworth tucked his sister and himself snugly into their cutter and started old Dobbin on a blisk trot, for there were three miles of crisp white-road to be covered, and it was almost chore time. When they were fairly un-der way Wentworth turned to his pret-ty sister, christened Elsie, but known as Toots to all her many friends, and said, "I hear you're going to get married, Toots.'

Miss Wentworth's very becoming sh was no doubt due to the weather of the thermometer hovered about zero. At any rate, she answered very composedly: "Oh, indeed! And who taid you, Mr. Smarty?"

"A little bird, Elsle from Chelsea; a little bird." He bent a waggish glance upon her. "I say, which one is it going to be?"

"Ask your little bird," she retorted. Bob tried a new tack. "Well, Harry Crossman is a nice fellow." "Indeed he is," replied his sister. "Good looking."

"Better looking than Luke Cotter, I think."

"Do you?"
"And more money too." "Yes."

"Romantic disposition too." Bob was warming to his theme. "Any fellow his sister's ned of assent. After a mement's silence he burst out boyishly: "Oh, I say, Toots, be a good fellow! Which one is it, and when is it going to be? 'Fess up now." Toots reflectively smoothed her muff; then she said cautiously, "Do you promise not to tease me?" The girl looked down pensively.

"They've both asked me." "Gotd."

"I don't know."
Miss Wentworth essayed to say more, but her courage failed her. Bob slapped Dobbin with the reins, interrupting a long drawn whistle to grin

Behind the sleigh a man in a fur coat clung stubbornly to a long rope. At the other end of the rope an angry steer was plunging and bellowing. Evidently the animal had been tied insecurely to the sleigh, had worked the knot loose and had been about to make a dash for liberty. At this moment the driver had discovered the status of things and taken a hand.

The man in the fur coat was awept off his feet by the move and sprawled full length on the snow. The steer charged the rail fence by the roadside, scattered the rails as if they were so many matches and galloped into the smooth meadow lot havand. The move smooth meadow lot beyond. The man still dangled at the end of the rope. As the animal began moving in a wide circle through the field he attempted repeatedly to rise, but his heavy coat and the plunging of the steer hampered

Bob leaped out of the cutter. "Luke Cotter," he remarked. "His arm's tangled in the rope so he can't get up. The beast can't hurt him, but that dragging will play the mischief with his coat."

There was a rapid thudding of hoofs down the road from behind, and a horseman, a handsome fellow, with dark hair, dashed by, with a smile and dark hair, dashed by, with a smile and a nod. He swung his borse through the gap in the fence and bore down on Cotter and the steer. Bob climbed back into the cutter and grinned. "Harry Crossman!" He settled himself to enjoy the denouement. "The plot and with the state and silent and enjoy the denouement. "The plot thickens." His sister sat silent and breathless.

Within half a minute the big bay was running easily in the rear of the prostrate Cotter. Crossman shrewdly anticipated the steer's next turn, grasped the rope midway and set his horse back upon its haunches. Checked in its career, the steer rolled over in the

In vain the animal threw his weight against the rope; he was conquered, and, accepting philosophically the fortunes of war, he suffered himself to be led book to the slaler. This time he led back to the sleigh. This time he was tied beyond the possibility of es-

Beyond a brief word of thanks to his rescuer in the field Cotter had preserved the most profound silence. Crossman rode up to the Wentworth cutter. His black mustache curled back, disclosing pouty lips, like those of a spoiled child, but he smiled modestly at the compliments for his clever action that Bob showered upon him.

When Cotter had finished tying the steer he walked over to the cutter. He surveyed his coat, here and there worn bare from contact with ice and snow and fence rails, in silence; he turned to the field and the circle, marked by bits of fur, around which he had so recently swung. The twinkle in his eye as he caught Miss Wentworth's eye was irresistible. In a mo-ment the whole party was shaken by a gale of merriment, Cotter's care free laughter ringing above all the rest. er!" She loved the fields and woods of Petrovsky, as well she might. It was in this neighborhood that she herself awaited the approach of her coronation, staying in Count Razumov's wonderful villa, which so astonished Lord Herbert and William Cox in 1778. She had he palace built to comme Russian victories over the Turks and intrusted the task to a native architect who knew how to adapt Gothic lines to Russian taste and to combine splender with comfort. The red walls, with their white stone facings and round towers, seen among the trees, give a delightful impression of elegant seclusion. Since Catherine's day all the emperors of Russia have awaited the day of the triumphal entry in the Petrovsky palace.—London Standard.

LIFE ON EASY STREET.

headed, brave hearted people living on Easy street than anywhere else in this broad land, and their prime condition is the natural consequence of living there, for, although you may not have thought of it, there is a close relationship existing between good health and the consciousness of getting on well in life. You can see this for yourself if you will note how a strong man droops, like a frost nipped flower, who by some mistake loses his position, his posses-sings or the estrong of his mistake loses his position, his posses-sions or the esteem of his fellows, one or all. Shylock made a hard bargain with a borrower, and in his effort to foreclose the bond lost his cash and won the contempt and scorn of all men. Mental disturbance followed, including physical ill being, and, staggering away from the judge's bench and clutching at the sir, he cried, "I am not well." But you need not go back so far to get an illustration. And on the other hand you can see by observing for yourself how the gain, or even the anticipated gain, of a home on Easy street will make a sick man well, quicken dying hopes into life and change the water of sorrow into the wine of joy. Recent literature has reminded us how a happy turn in the tide of the affairs of Josiah Wedgwood. afterward to become the world's great ploneer pottery artist and inventor, raised him from an invalid's couch and started him upon the road to affluence and distinction among England's in-dustrial princes. Many call any plant which grows on a tree or has some peculiar feature an orchid. This mistake is frequently Catherine Bullt the Palace.

The Petrovsky palace is a charming monument to the mere picturesque side of Catherine the Greaf's character. It was her villa without the walls of Moscow, where she could live at her ease, surrounded by her intimates, the Apraxins, the Volkonskys, the Golitsins, the Razumovs. She would have no soldiers to guard her. She preferred to rest under the protection of her own people, and the people came crowding about the palace, saying: "Make no noise! Do not disturb our little mother?" Emerson says in effect, "The virtue you would like to have, assume it as already yours, appropriate it, enter into the part and live the character just as the great actor is absorbed in the character of the part he plays." No matter how great your weakness or how much you may regret it, assume steadily and persistently its opposite until you acquire the habit of holding that thought or of living the thing not in its weakness, but in its wholeness, in its entirety. Hold the ideal of an efficient faculty or quality, not of a marred or deficient one.
