MRS. DE ARMAN WAS JUSTIFIED

The eyes of many were filled with ears at the scene before them—Justice

Holloway standing, hands outstretched, before the defendant—who fainted as soon as she heard the sentence. Only about a minute elapsed after the argument made by Attorney P. Schenck, who defended Mrs. De Arman, until the Judge gave his decision.

Mrs. U. Z. De Arman, wife of the well known horseman, was taken before Justice Holloway this morning for the pre-liminary examination. She was charged with shooting Mrs. Helen Griffin, who, she believed, had alicnated her husband's affections, and was planning to take him away from her. The killing took place in the post office at Montovia.

The events that led up to the shooting covered a period of five years of unhappy married life, which Mrs. De Arman had endured, she said, for the sake of her four children, Lynnie De Arman, Annie De Arman, Cecil De Arman and Clay De Arman.

De Arman, During March she told several of her friends that the strain was becoming too great. She could not bear, she said, the taunts which Mrs. Griffin directed the taunts, which Mrs. Griffin directed at her at every opportunity and the in-sistent statements made by Mrs. Griffin that she, too, was Mrs. De Arman. Driven almost to desperation, she first resolved to end her own life and the lives of her children, too, in the fear that they would come into the care of Mrs. Griffin. She made preparations to do this, buying a bottle of earbolic acid, and when this was taken from her, she secured a bottle of laudanum. At the last moment, however, Mrs. De

MARKETS and FINANCE

Tuesday, April 21.—The market was very singgish this morning, and prices suffered somewhat. Meat prices were very much depressed and pork and hogs broke. Veal also tumbled a few cents, and spring lamb lost a few points. The heavy market of Saturday spoiled the meat prices, and big shipments which came in late were untouched. Vegetables are easy, and the butter and egg market is rather quiet. Eggs were unusually plentiful. The rest of the market was small, and breaks in the prices are expected this afternoon or before Thursday.
