The College of the Propaganda.

Anglicans have chosen to call themselves Catholic, and its Roman Catholic with a sinister stress on the adjective. Only throughout the British dominions, with an obscure futility "Missions" in Spain and Italy, is the Church of England found, and the claim of that Church to Catholicity is as valid as would be that of Imperial Rome whose paganism flourished throughout the Empire.

"At the entrance of the Piazza di Spagna, the centre of the English district in Rome, is the Piazza Mignanelli which recalls Turner, who painted many a picture as he sat at his window here. But the locality possesses a higher interest than ever the memory of Turner can suggest. For it is the entrance to the lecture halls of the Propaganda College. Entering by the Piazza di Spagna is the printing office of the Propaganda. On the right of the printing establishment you see a door surmounted by a cross and a globe with the legend "Eritis ergo doctores omnes gentes" (Going there you teach ye all nations). You have wandered through the gilded aisles of St. Peter's and observed the confessionals ranged beneath its walls with their significant inscriptions "Pro Lingua Gallica, Pro Lingua Hispanica, Pro Lingua Germanica, Pro Lingua Anglica," and so on through all known tongues, but to find the realization of the Church's universality you must come to the Schools of Propaganda. At 8 o'clock on a sunny Roman morning you place yourself under the column of the Immaculate, opposite Piazza Mignanelli. The column under which you stood was erected by Christian martyrs at the will of a pagan master. Was it revealed to the holy martyrs that the pile which they were erecting would in after ages proclaim the fact of Mary's sinlessness, and through her, Son's divinity for whom they wore their chains?

"Presently there comes a band of five or six hundred church students of every race and land under the sun for their morning lecture in the schools hard by. From two sides of the Piazza di Spagna come two more bands of students, the one American with their swinging gate the other you notice as Orientals, Syrians. The Yankee you could not mistake for his very walk proclaims his nationality, springing forward with long strides and looking all around him with the confident self-assurance of the free-born son of Columbia. The contrast in the physiognomy of the American and the Oriental is not less marked, the one fair and clean shaven, the other dark and bearded, denizens of worlds distinct in everything from the restless West. From the placid East they come hither for one end—the priesthood of the One Religion. Other bands arrived and you saw before you a panorama of colour, but sustained by an infinite variety of red, yellow and blue, in every shade and hue. Here was another party of students in detachments of fifteen with red sashes and black stoles plentifully trimmed with pale blue, fastened with buttons of the same colour. Over the cassock they wore an overcoat—the soprano—with wide arm-holer, and a long streamer flying from each shoulder. That of the Americans was black, but as they strode along the wind lifted it revealing the pale blue lining underneath? Here also was a group of Bihemians in black and yellow, and passing close behind them some students from the Emerald Isle in red and black with long tassels hanging from the wide brimmed hats. A band of Poles followed, wearing green sashes. A band of Russians, tall and bearded, came next, flaunting their colours of sky blue and gold. Stalwart Scots in episcopal purple and sul and red, and brown and red, bareheaded Franciscans, bailing also from the Green Isle followed. Close upon them came a band

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes blemishes in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"Two of my children had scrofula sores which kept growing deeper and kept them from going to school for three months. Ointments and medicines did no good until I began giving them Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine caused the sores to heal, and the children have shown no sign of scrofula since." J. W. McIlroy, Woodstock, Ont.

will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as it has rid thousands.

of Armenians, small wiry figures with untrimmed beards, and robed in huge black cloaks with enormous sleeves.

"Looking now at the Piazza, you thought that half Rome's population consisted of ecclesiastics, but fresh arrivals kept coming on the scene. Some students of servile Order in their old world dress. Orons Regular in white and black, Carmelites, Trappists, Redemptorists, Carthusians came on, having in their ranks Frenchmen, Italians, Canadians, Deans, Spaniards, and other nationalities, undistinguishable in the crowd.

The Greeks too there clad, like the Armenians, in a monstrous garment of capacious sleeves, but with hair flowing over their shoulders and closely cropped beards. From the right of the Piazza came another band black clad, with abundant trimmings of scarlet. These were students from the Urban College. As they defiled past you, two by two, you saw from their colour and physiognomy that they were gathered to the bosom of Rome from the four ends of the world Europeans and Asiatic of every nation and full-blooded, thick-lipped, woolly-haired negroes.

If you had left over any Latin from your College days you might have recognized their conversation. For how otherwise could that stout Dutchman be understood by his pale faced Chinese companion, or the swarthy Spaniard by the red-faced Norwegian? Italians and those to whom long residence in Rome made Italian a second mother tongue, conversed in the lingua italiana. Flat-faced oval-eyed, delicate Chinese and their lively cousins from Japan; negroes from the West Indies and from Africa passed by, paired off with Scotchmen, and Danes, Russians, Chaldeans and Maronites from Mount Lebanon.

There were French Swiss and German Swiss, and Italian Swiss, with Scotchmen, Canadians and Australians. There were Americans of every race that has found a home beneath the star-spangled banner, making acquaintance with the land of their forbears in the persons of their fellow students Dutch from Holland and Dutch from the Cape, Austrians and Roumanians, Swedes, Germans and Italians, Spaniards from the Iberian, Penin-ula, and from South America, Englishmen, Arabs and Bulgarians, and yet we have not named all the nationalities and races that made up that motley gathering.

"How can harmony dwell in so cosmopolitan a gathering, where diversity of race must of necessity imply diversity of character? What is the common element binding them together? you wondered. If one Sunday you went to the College Chapel you would find High Mass celebrated perhaps by a Dutchman, assisted by a Chinaman and a Scotchman as Deacon and Sub-Deacon, with acolytes who represented Madrid and Yokohama and Dublin, and a circle of faces whose features and colors bespoke a score of nations.

"The students had all disappeared and the Piazza was empty. We espied a professor in soutane and broad-brimmed hat, with his eyes on a paper, hurrying to the door. We wanted if possible to get up, and confronted him. He surveyed us with a keen glance and tried us with a little Italian. We shook our heads and said: "ne parlate Italiano." He asked Vio parlate, but the query was intercepted by our companion who uttered the word Ingles, whereupon to our great joy the professor addressed us in English, and took us up a flight of marble steps into a hall quite alive with the hum of a hundred voices. It was the hall devoted to philosophy. The students were busy arranging pen and paper on desks. We sat ourselves down on a hard narrow bench. Properly appeared the lecturer, another priest, stout tall and white haired, from whose keen, sharp glance our unwonted presence did not escape. A dead silence ensued, and the lecturer began. Also we had forgotten that the language of the school was Latin. We could still translate Cæsar and Livy and spill out a Latin epithet, but it is quite another matter to get it right at this time under a professor who speaks Latin as fluently as if it were Suffered More Than Tongue Can Tell From Liver Trouble.

A lazy, slow or torpid liver is a terrible affliction, as its influence permeates the whole system, causing Biliousness, Heartburn, Water Brash, Langour, Coated Tongue, Sick Headache, Yellow Eyes, Sallow Complexion, etc. It holds back the bile, which is required to move the bowels, and lets it get into the blood instead, thus causing Constipation.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the flow of bile to act properly upon the bowels, and will tone, renovate and purify the liver. Mrs. J. C. Westberg, Swan River, Man., writes:—"I suffered for years, more than tongue can tell, from liver trouble. I tried several kinds of medicine, but could get no relief until I got Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I cannot praise them too highly for what they have done for me."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. per vial, or 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Fort William Strike Has Collapsed.

Fort William, Aug. 25.—The striking longshoremen will return to work in the morning. The difference between the men and the Co., are left in the hands of a conciliation board which has been applied for. Such was the decision arrived at this afternoon at a mass meeting attended by 5000 people mostly foreigners and presided over by Mayor Pelletier. "It was the most important labor meeting ever held in the city and its stage setting bore silent testimony to the stirring scenes of Thursday last. In the centre stood Mayor Pelletier on two packing cases. About him as closely as they could get the stalwart Greeks the backbone of the strike, lined up behind them. The Hungarians stood in the rear. The Canadian mounted riflemen stood with loaded arms in readiness for the trouble which looked certain. The strikers were in a nasty mood but the Mayor soon convinced them he was their friend and meant to do the right thing for them. The mayor then announced that he had received assurance of General Manager Bury that all men applying would be taken back to work the first thing in the morning under the old agreement. This announcement was greeted with cheers for the majority of strikers were adverse to remaining out any longer. As soon as men return peacefully to work the troops will be withdrawn and that will be tomorrow for the strikers this afternoon decided their only policy is to go to work.

The Fleet.

The charge made by Lord Charles Bessford that the organization and distribution of the fleet was not what it should be has been pronounced against by the Committee of Defence. This is satisfactory, though probably it will fail to convince all the critics. The present distribution of Great Britain's naval forces is the result of a revolution in which Sir John Fisher was understood to be the moving mind. It involved the abandonment of the North American and West Indian and the North Pacific stations. It reduced the strength of the squadron in Eastern Asiatic waters. Then it concentrated in the Mediterranean and British waters the most powerful vessels afloat, cruisers and battleships. The idea, as explained at the time, was that if danger became serious in any part of the world outside of Europe squadrons would be dispatched from the established bases and, if necessary, reserve ships would be called out to take the place of the craft sent from their usual stations. If this plan has been departed from it has been in detail rather than principle. The fleets that have their stations at Malta, Gibraltar, and the points on the British coast are the most powerful that are afloat, as regards the fighting capacity of the ships that compose them, and heavily outnumber those of any possible enemy they could be called on to meet. If on land the fortune of war may be presumed to favor the heaviest battalions, it can be held that at sea, as things are now, any naval conflict into which Great Britain could be drawn in Europe would see her enemy begin at a serious disadvantage. This is the most that can be expected from those who have the organization, distribution and direction of the fleet in their hands. It can be believed also that the men who are continually improving the class of ships of which the fleets are composed, and whose designs are being copied by the admiralties of all other naval powers, may be good authorities as well on the number and classification of the vessels that compose the various divisions of the great fleet.—Montre, Gazette.

Situation in Crete Grows More Acute.

London, August 14.—Unless Greece complies with the demand of Turkey and forces the people of Crete to haul down the Greek flag which they have hoisted there, the protecting powers of Great Britain, Russia, Italy and France will perform this act using force if necessary. This was the substance of a joint note signed by the four powers, and presented to the Turkish Government today. In order to carry out this policy and to be prepared to use force if necessary to oblige the Cretans to haul down the objectionable flag, each of the four protecting powers decided today to send an additional warship to Crete, the capital of the island of Crete, and at the same time expressed the hope to the Turkish government that in view of the steps they had taken that Turkey will not think it necessary to order her fleet to the Cretan waters. The joint note of the powers to Turkey today is the direct result of a communication from the Cretan government, declaring it was unable to enforce the hauling down of the Greek flag. This action of the powers followed sharply upon Turkey's note to Greece yesterday demanding a formal declaration respecting her intentions as to Crete, and thus creating a situation grave enough to move the powers to action. (Sailors from the ship, the protecting powers have since landed and lowered the flag in strict order.)

Little Willie—Say, Pa, what is a hypocrite?

Pa. A hypocrite, my son, is a man who publicly thanks Providence for his success, then gets mad every time anybody insinuates that he isn't mainly responsible for it himself.

Sapphead—You saved me from being killed by that auto. I owe my life to you. How shall I ever repay you?

Scouten—Young man, don't you let trifling debts like that worry you.
