Nfld. Scotch

Cured Herring.

The market for Newfoundland Scotch cured herring remains featureless and the demand dull. Whereas the outlook was considered bright a fortnight ago, the arrival of stocks of winter and spring herring in the market since, and the report that something like 20,000 barrels were yet to be shipped, altered the situation materially. Holders of fancy stocks of Newfoundland herring are not in the least alarmed about the prospects of the coming season. It is not considered as likely that there will be any great supply of herring from Scotland, and the turn of events in the past week (two cargoes of herring were shipped to Norway) is considered a happy augury for the future disposition of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring. It is understood that several New York importers have already quoted Newfoundland herring to Germany and the prospects of this business are considered as good. According to the trade, stocks in the hands of merchants here have been moving only in a hand-to-mouth way, and there are no immediate prospects of an improvement. Some locally held stocks have been sold at low prices during the week, but fancy quality is fairly held still. Indeed some of the largest holders are asking from $18 to $22 per barrel for their goods. Other stocks have been sold all the way from $12 to $16 per barrel. There is no indication when the remainder of the 20,000 barrels held in St. John's will come forward.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, July 12.

Vanity Bags vs. Vest.

A writer in the New York Sun, speaking no doubt largely from experience, delivers himself sagely as follows upon this important subject: The male biped does not shed his waistcoat because he dislikes it of itself. It is a useful thing, handier than a pocket in a shirt. He takes it because of the heat, and not without regret. The waistcoat holds so many things. The upper left-hand pocket was made for pencils and fountain pens and cigars. Since the top of ear was discarded as a pencil-holder there has been nothing half so good as that pocket. The opposite upper pocket is just the place for the memorandum-book. The watch sleeps alone in one of the lower pockets, across from the home of the man's knife or match-box. The inside pocket of the waistcoat is peculiarly adapted to carrying money. A thief cannot get it without cutting.

When the waistcoat is hung up for the summer its working contents must be put elsewhere. The coat, already overloaded with handkerchiefs, wallets, letters, cigarette-cases, and communication-tickets, is asked to take up what the turf reporters call a staggering impost. The trousers, with their standard burden of money and keys, can make little room for the articles evicted from the waistcoat. So every June the man wonders whether he shall tether his watch to the lap of his coat and let it joggle around in his breast-pocket, or whether he'll try it once more in the waistband-pocket of his trousers and look upon its face only after an exhibition of gymnastics. Shall the fountain pen be attached to the coat pocket or laid away until autumn?

Man suffers for a while. He finds himself without matches when he has a cigar, or without a pen when he has a check-book. His memorandum book gets lost in the bottom of his pocket. He is all at sea, and merely because he is not the efficient creature that woman is. She puts all her junk and all her worries in the faithful hand-bag. Fashions change in clothing and in bags, but the mess of small belongings is always carried in the same way. If man would ape woman in this respect he would be more comfortable. He need not carry a silken reticule; a canvas sack would do, with a strap to go over the shoulder. Perhaps some of the fellows who carry brief-cases are secretly taking a leaf from woman's book. Al Smith once said that if you held up a reformer and looked in his brief-case you would find sandwiches in it, not great public documents. A brief-case would hold cigars, pencils, and handkerchiefs. Maybe in time all men will carry these leather cases just as all women carry bags.

Regatta Doings.

Interest in the coming regatta is increasing daily and each evening large numbers assemble at the lakeside to watch the crews at practice. Some of the crews are out both morning and evening and are rapidly getting into form. The Shannanditti was placed in the water yesterday and with three boats out, the work of practice will be greatly facilitated. The Truckmen, Laborers, Juveniles, Amateur and football crews were out last evening, and also the Telegram six, who had their first spin. With the latter competing there will be five crews in the Press race.

Solving the Investment Problem

Some men gamble on prospects; others plunge blindly and trust to luck, while others invest their broker first, and then his proposition. Before investing, there are certain facts to be considered.

First—Are the men behind your company honorable, capable business gentlemen?

Second—Have they a proposition that will stand the acid test of close investigation?

Third—Is there room for Growth besides the Safety of your principal?

When you have satisfied yourself on the above points, it is time to use your JUDGMENT to help you DECIDE and then ACT.

Let us show you a two year investment that nets you 18 per cent. a year WITHOUT risk.
