NORAH CUSHALEEN

OR THE HAUNTED CASTLE.

'Hae care on us a', he ejaculated, 'that's a grave they are howkin, and the body maun be in the boxes.' Save us and keep us, they've cut it into three pairs to bring it easier up the mountains. Hech, but this is a savage kninry. A murder is naething tae the Irish folk. I've often heard that they shoot at folk frae a hint hedges, and fell them stane deid wi' cudgels, a' for little or neething and faith I doot it's ower true. Here's been ane o' their midnight assassinations, and the body o' their victim is tae be hidden up in this out-o'-the-way place.'

'While Andrew was thus cogitating, the three men continued their work, and having dug the hole large enough for their purpose, they carefully deposited the three boxes in the excavation, and turned in the earth above them, treading it well down with their feet, and bringing over it the nettles and tall grass which grew near.

'Be jabbers, and it's safe enough here, anyhow,' remarked one, when the work was finished.

'Arrah, and its meself that's o' the same opinion,' said another. 'It may lie here till the day o' judgement without any one comin' across it.

'Barrin' our backs,' observed the third at which they all laughed, and walking towards the fragment of a doorway, disappeared, leaving the place to its usual solitude.

'The crayers can even mak' merry ower a murder,' said Andrew with a shudder. 'But dinna craw sae croose, ye villains, yer deed o' bluid isna sae weel hidden as ye think. Ma certie, ye little kennaed that Andrew Donaldson was keekin' at ye frae this hole. But loosh preserve us, it may no be safe tae let on, this is sic a lawless kninry. Dear a ane o' me kens what tae dae, but I'll awa back tae my bed an' sleep out, that is if I can sleep. I declare I'm a' in a groove.'

Andrew got upon his couch again, but sleep he could not. The near vicinity of a newly buried murdered body called up a cloud of fearful thoughts, and the very idea that he, and he alone, knew of the dark crime, created an excitement which effectually banished slumber. So he tossed about till break of day, thinking of the scene he had witnessed. At last he fell into a sleep which was even more distressing than his waking thoughts, for it was full of dreams, and the dreams were concerning murders, of which he was a horrified spectator. Then to bring his agony to a climax, he imagined that he was now the victim. A fierce red-whiskered Irishman was kneeling on his breast with a bright knife in his hand, which he was about to plunge into his throat. This occasioned a terror which produced desperation; and Andrew, making a frantic effort to escape from his murderer, rolled from his couch upon the floor, and awoke.

A thankful man was he when he found it was but a dream, and with a long sigh of relief he gathered himself up. His first act was to approach the loop-hole, and gaze on the corner where the body had been buried. To one who had not Andrew's knowledge there was little to indicate that the earth had been disturbed, but he saw at a glance the patches of fresh earth that had not been trodden upon, and the broken stalks of nettles which the feet of the murderer had crushed. Though it was now sunlight instead of moonlight, Andrew could not look upon the spot without a feeling of dread.

'I never used tae tak' any thocht in to my head about speer', he said to himself, 'but maist folk believe that the ghost o' a murdered man haunts the spot where his body is buried till the murderers are fun' out and brocht tae justice. If that's true, there's a speerit wandering about this ruin, an' nae doot it will expect me tae bring the crime tae day light. Maybe it will haunt me till I tell and by tellin', wha kens but I may be murdered next. Oh, dear, I wish I was awa frae this fearful place. I wonder if Norah saw the vagabonds at their infernal work.'

Andrew was satisfied on this point when he went up with Norah's breakfast. The latter received him with her usual equanimity. It was evident that she had seen nothing of the midnight funeral; and, in fact, Andrew soon made himself sure that she could not, for, on going to the loop-hole in her chamber, he found that it did not command a view of the spot.

All that day his mind was filled with the one subject, and he was puzzled to decide whether or not to inform his master. He believed that his own safety would be imperilled by disclosing the secret, and he knew that the moment Hargreave was made aware of it, his love of justice would prompt him to lay the matter before the authorities. After that there would be an investigation, when he must appear as the principal witness, and this would bring him into special notice, and probably draw upon him the vengeance of the murderers.

After long and deep deliberation, Andrew came to the conclusion that he would say nothing about it. If he had got the matter entirely out of his mind at the same time, it would have been an immense relief; but the near vicinity of that secret grave and the possible neighbourhood of the wandering spirit of its murdered tenant, disturbed him very seriously. Fifty times during the day he was drawn as if by fascination to the loop-hole, and his eyes were fixed as by a spell upon the fatal corner. Once at the twilight, before the beams of the moon grew strong enough to dispel the evening shadows, he thought he saw a white haze floating over the grave.

'There, that's the speerit noo,' he said to himself as a shudder crept over him. He rubbed his eyes and looked again, but the haze was gone.

CENTRE RIDING

OF WELLINGTON.

To the Electors of the Centre Riding of Wellington.

GENTLEMEN,

Having received a requisition signed by 416 of the most influential electors from different parts of the Riding, requesting me to allow myself to be put in nomination for the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, in compliance with the said requisition, I now offer myself as a candidate for your suffrages for the representation of your constituency.

My address has been circulated throughout the Riding. To it I would refer you for my views on the political topics that are now agitating the country, also for my views on the powers conferred on the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, and for my views on the duties of your representative under the new state of things inaugurated under the Confederation Bill.

I shall endeavor to see as many of the electors as time and circumstances will permit at the meetings that I intend holding before the election comes on, when I shall explain myself more fully on the political questions of the day.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

JAMES LOGHRIN.

INDIA & CHINA TEA CO'Y.

Home Depot at London and Liverpool.

Canada Depot, 23 Hospital Street, Montreal.

THE India and China Tea Company beg to call the attention of the Canadian community to the indirectly imported Teas, which for purity and excellence will be found unequalled.

The Company have made arrangements whereby they have secured the entire produce of some of the best plantations in Assam and on the slopes of the Himalayas, and by a judicious blending of these magnificent Teas with the best varieties of China produce, they are enabled to offer to the public Tea of quality and flavour hitherto unknown to the general consumer. These Teas are in high favour in England and France, and a single trial will prove their superiority.

The Company supply two qualities only, either Black, Green or Mixed. Their Black Teas will be found to possess great briskness and flavour, combined with colour and strength, and to be entirely different to the flat and rapid article usually sold as Black Tea; while their Green Teas are altogether free from the deleterious mineral powder so commonly used for coloring the leaf.

PRICES: Rich full-flavoured Tea for family use a real genuine and fine article, 70 cents per lb. Finest quality procurable, one dollar per lb.

The above can be had either Black, Green or Mixed.

To be had in packets of Quarter Pound Half Pound, One Pound, and upwards, or in tin canisters of 5 lbs. and upwards, and the Company's Agents in all the chief towns of Canada.—N. B. All the packages are lined with tin foil paper, and the Tea will consequently retain its flavour any length of time.

Observe.—All packages have the Company's trade-mark, without which none are genuine.
