Canon Dann, the honorary chaplain of the regiment, said that he was pleased to see that the veterans' dis-tinguished services in the past had been recognized. The medals were the evidence of the nation's sympathy in their work of defending the country. It wasn't of reward that they were thinking. In this they differed from many who were at present in the Boer army, who fought because of hatred for England or love of money. The heart of the Britisher rose against slavery and tyrrany. They fought for liberty, truth and justice. The medals were the testimony of the nation's sympathy in their efforts to defend their country.

COUNTERFEITERS

History of One of the Most Important Cases in the Dominion Police Annals.

How Anthony Decker and His Confederates Were Chased for a Year-Had an Ingenious Code.

Ottawa, Feb. 3.-The great counterfeit mystery that has been occupying the attention of the Dominion police ed, and the four principals are safely lodged behind prison bars. The names of those implicated and where they were arrested are as follows: Anthony Decker, Baltimore; Paul Decker, Woodstock; Mrs. Anthony Decker, Hamilton; Hans Kuntz, Lon-

The case is one of the most important in the annals of the Dominion police department, and Commissioner Sherwood and his men are to be congratulated on their success. The history of the case goes back to a year ago. Last year there appeared some excellent counterfeits of Dominion one dollar bills, and in Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal many were discovered. The counterfeits were excellent reproductions of the original, and the police were much agitated about them. The case was immediately taken up by Commissioner Sherwood, and in a short time the responsibility for their appearance was traced to a man named Decker, in the employ of the Burland Bank Note Company of Montreal. Decker was an expert engraver, and although suspicion rested upon him, no arrest could be made at the time. He was by some means warned that he was being watched, and in a few hours the gang had mysteriously disappeared. The commissioner immediately set his machine going, and Constable Parkinson, of the force, started on a hunt for the gang. The job has been a long one, and it was continual chase from one place to another, and this, with the difficulty of obtaining evidence at the right moment, prevented the men from being landed. Later Anthony Decker came back to Montreal with the rest of the gang, but by some means friends warned them that they were being watched by having an item inserted in a Montreal paper. Again the plans of the police were foiled, and the gang was again dispersed. They moved from Montreal to Toronto, London, Woodstock, Hamilton and Baltimore. The chase, however, was kept up, and the four principals safely lodged in jail, all in different cities.

Anthony Decker, the leader, was one of the best engravers in Montreal, being employed in the Burland Bank Note Company. On account or his hitherto good character it was difficult to get at him. He was arrested in Baltimore yesterday. He had in his possession cypher code, which was unique in construction. It consisted of a combination of letters, by which warnings could be sent to one another when hard pressed. As, for instance, "R. A," I am being shadowed by detectives; "W. T," this place is getting too hot for me; "JL," I have been arrested; "LF," I have escaped; "GP," send me one hundred dollars, and many sentences of a similar character. The key for the code was also found, and a Molsons $5 note and two prints of counterfeit back. Paul Decker, alias Paul Rose, alias Harry Rose, was arrested in Wood-stock Thursday by Constable Parkin-son, of the Dominion force. With him were found a large plate of the back of a $5 Molsons note, and two V's, an outfit for an engraver, with tools complete, and six cans of color. A note printing press and all paraphernalia for counterfeiting was found. Paul Decker is a son of Anthony Decker.

Hans Kuntz, who was arrested in London, was working with the others. With him were found paper for making notes and a quantity of coloring. Kunts is an expert transferer. Mrs. Decker was arrested in Hamilton and a $2 counterfeit plate found with her. This completes the gang, and the department will at once commence proceedings. Inspector Hogan left for Woodstock last night to superin-tend the case. A remand will be ask-ed for until Monday. All the plates and bills found were of the Molsons Bank. These, with the one-dollar notes, are duplicates of notes handled by the Burland firm in Montreal. Decker was one of the oidest hands in that establishment. He is 50 years of age, 5 feet 10 inches in height, and weighs 150 pounds. His skin is pale and dark. He carries a black mustache and wears eyeglasses. Montreal, Feb. 3.—Anthony Decker was brought to this city from Baltimore, Md., by a Dominion officer to A few other arrests are expected to be made here and will complete the greatest counterfeit round-up in Canadian history. When Decker had made up his mind to get out an issue of $5 bills by himself he associated with him his son Paul, a young man of about 20 and a man named Hans Kuntz. The Decker family was living at 172 Elgln street, in this city, and there the gov-ernment trackers, directed by Col. Sherwood and Supt. McCaskill, began their chase, and never let up for eight months. The elder Decker came to the conclusion, however, that it would be better, although he had a press at home, to do the work in some other city, and went out west to prospect. It must be understood that it was impossible for Decker to do the work alone, for, though he was a skilled stone engraver, he would have

He first went to Toronto, but he got it in his head that he was being watch ed there. Then he went to Windsor, and, leaving his luggage there, became uneasy, and went to Detroit, from which place he took a little tour around various cities in the United States, traveling under the name of Rose. After that, having become somewhat convinced that he was not followed after all, he came back, his unsuspected retinue of Dominion government de-tectives in his wake. He went to London, and for some time stopped at the Richmond Hotel. After that he rented a house, giving himself out as a civil engineer. He then came back to Montreal. Here he was met at the station by his wife and son. They drove to the house on Elgin street, discussed mat-ters as to the future campaign, and decided that the old gentleman had better go and recuperate for a while, which he did at Ste. Anne. In the meantime the wife and children arranged to leave to go west. When he had enough of Ste. Anne, the elder Decker went back to London. His wife and family, barring the son, fol-The son looked after the sale of the furniture of the house, and also bought the necessary paper. This he took to London, but it was found at one time that the paper, which was ordinary bond paper, was not of the proper texture, and other paper had to be bought. The firm from which he bought, it seems, had not sufficient of it in stock, and this caused another delay, for, judging from the proposed order for paper, it was the intention to make, with about one week's printing, about $250,000 worth of bills. The paper was bought from the firm of Austin & Robertson, on St. Paul street, which was utterly unaware for what purpose it was going to be used. At the same time the work of engraving the plates and stones went on merrily in London, Ont., and one day in the beginning of December, Col. Sherwood received word from one of his shadows that they were on the point of printing. Immediately Sherwood telegraphed Superintendent McCaskill, and the two, meeting at Toronto, went to London. The illness of one of the crowd, they found out, had stopped the work exactly the evening before they arrived. They hung around for about a week, traveling between Toronto, London, Woodstock and Detroit, and hoping that the man might get well, but in vain. He stubbornly insisted on keeping ill for a while, and so the field was left again to those invaluable "shadows." Finally the scare came a day or so ago, and it was thought better to make the arrests at once.

Mrs. Anthony Decker was arraigned before Magistrate Jelfs at Hamilton Saturday and remanded until Tuesday.

The flames were confined to the upper flat of the new building, but not before the roof and a portion of the upper walls had fallen in. The finished stock in the upper flat is a complete loss, and the other floors, containing the action, case trimming and stock rooms, were aged by water. Loss estimated at $25,-000; partly covered bp insurance.

Detroit, Feb. 4.—Fire was discovered in the top floor of the five-story building at the corner of Woodward avenue and Clifford street, at 8:45 last night, and the Satutrday evening throng of shoppers was treated to a display of good work on the part of the firemen, as the department subdued a promising blaze in less than an hour, and confined it whoily to the story where it originated. YESTERDAY'S SNOWSTORM

The Heaviest of the Winter-Ten Inches of Snow Fell-Snowplows and Street Railway Sweeper Kept

Yesterday's fall of snow was the heaviest of this winter. It commenced shortly before midnight, Saturday, and continued steadily until after daybreak Sunday morning. The snowplows were out early, in order to make walking a possibility, but before church time it commenced snowing again, and pedestrianism was anything but pleasant. The effect was noticeable in many of the churches. During the afternoon the storm continued with unabated vigor, and it was again necessary to have the plows out. In the evening the wind subsided and the fall of snow stopped, and the day of storm was closed with a bright evening. About ten inches of snow fell altogether. The street railway was kept clear during the day with the large sweeper, and as the snow was dry and light it was easily swept away. The resu ting piles at the sides of the tracks were dangerous to vehicles, and in several places it was necessary to cart the snow away. Railway traffic was not materially affected, although the trains from Michigan were somewhat late. It was not found necessary to sends out the

TURER. There was a sensational announcemen in Paris of the arrest of a German officer as a spy. This proved incorrect, however, the man being arrested at a Paris hotel and escorted to the frontier under a previous decree of expulsion. Inquiries have brought to light the fact that the man expelled was a remarkable adventurer, whose career is bound up in the history of France and Germany. He comes from an Irish family and is a wonderful linguist and an accomplished scholar. He was at one time tutor to Emperor William of Germany, but was dismissed owing to his infliction of corporal punishment upon the future emperor for the slightest faults. He then became a lieutenant in the army, fought in several actions and gained a captaincy in the Franco-German war. A financial scandal led to his retirement from the army, and he entered the German espionage service and came to France. He was shortly afterwards expelled. He led a checkered career, having been imprisoned both in France and Germany, and was last heard of when he escaped from a mad house in

Lorraine. He now springs to life again in Paris and has again been expelled. GERMAN PRESS COMMENT. German press comment during the past week was much more moderate. There was a remarkable editorial in the Voerwaerts, headed "England at the turn of the road," saying England's prestige thus far has not suffered by the war defeats; but the paper advises England's laboring population to insist on the rapid conclusion of peace as their interests, above all, would suffer by a longer war.
