AGONIZING STOMACH

Dear Sirs,—I know a business man on the east side of town who has for years been alling and suffering agonizing pains in the stomach. The doctors, from Prof. Jacoby down to others by the dozens, could neither effect a cure nor could they even teli what the malady was. He, a few years ago, crossed the Atlantic to consult German doctors, without result. I used to call at his store every few months and heard his tale of woe. He said while ill he was never able to retain his food, and at certain times of the day he was attacked with an agonizing pain which lasted an hour or so, when he acted as a madman, breaking chairs, etc., and having to give up business for the time being. Food never stayed on his stomach longer than half an hour. Yesterday, after a lapse of 18 months, I called again, and, to my surprise, he was still alive and looking well. I asked him about his health. He said he had been well for over a year, and had gained 40 pounds in weight. I wanted to know what doctor had cured him. This is what he told me: About a year ago or over a man came to his store, telling him he had been rick very much the same as he was for some time, and tried Radway's Pills, which quickly cured him. He at once decided to use the pills. The druggist did not have any, and tried to give him another kind, but as he insisted on Radway's they were procured for him the next day. He only took one at night, and he immediately felt better. He kept up for a time to take the pills, and from the first day to this day his malady never returned.

The man beneath the shade of the umbrella opened his heavy eyes and listened to the lap-lap of the river, as it rushed softly through the rushes at his feet; then he gazed amazed at the shelter over his head, and turned his heavy head gratefully on the pillow. Too idle to rise, he listened to the distant whisper of the storm, which sounded so weird in the heavy stillness of the heat. All at once a sharp old voice

"Now, young man, if your nap is ended I'll thank you for my pillow." The little old lady's face was far less stern than her tongue, for her old eyes had a look of compassion, and her toothless mouth trembled with sympathy. The man saw this, for he thanked ner gratefully for her care of him, and asked if he might bathe in the river. She said yes, and a few moments later he was laving the water with a delicious sense of the renewal of strength. When he came on shore he found a bit of carpet to sit upon, the umbrella still left to shield him and a couple of coarse towels to make use of.

All gratefully then, looking a new man, he shook the dust from his ragged garments, and with a new sense cf their unworthiness, he stepped up to the door of the cottage and returned the eld lady's property with grateful words. She asked him to step in and join her at her cosy tea-table. Only too gladly he complied, and seated in the pleasant kitchen listened to the old woman's casy chatter with a strange sersation of ease. When he rose to depart his form swayed, turned round, and fell with a dull thud upon the floor. The old woman with vinegar, chafed his rough hands, cruel contempt: and by the time the dazed eyes unclesed had grown so sorry for him that
