LONDON, TUESDAY, NOV. 1.

MR. BRODEUR'S IMPERIAL UTTERANCE.

Members of the Federal Government have been accused by their opponents of presenting their naval policy in one light in Ontario, and in another and very different light in Quebec. Here is an extract from Hon. Mr. Brodeur's at the nominations in Drummond and Arthabaskaville, as reported in Mr. Bourassa's paper, Le Devoir:

"Our marine has been created in order to protect our coasts and our trade (commerce d'exporta-IT HAS BEEN CREATED ALSO TO AID GREAT BRITAIN IN CASE OF NEED, IN ORDER THAT THE MOTHER COUNTRY MAY CONSERVE HER SUPREM ACY OF THE SEAS NECESSARY TO OUR OWN WELFARE. It this supremacy that conserves and will conserve the rights and liberties accorded us by Great Britain. And in speaking thus, I do not dissociate myself from my ministerial responsibility. I speak in my capacity of minister, and in the name of the Government.

This utterance is a sufficient reply to the misrepresentation of the Government in this Province.

The Nationalists are denouncing the naval policy as a surrender to Imperialism, which they paint in terrifying Mr. Bourassa tells his audences that in twenty years a Canadian youth may be torn from the arms of | tian Satan his parents by a press-gang to fight the battles of England in distant seas. This is as far from the truth as the language of some Ontario journals, which describe the naval project as a conspiracy to separate Canada from

He feared imperial disaster unless the Dreadnought programme was greatly extended at once. The "last shilling" must be spent and "no pedantries of finance" permitted to intefere in the work. If necessary the money should be borrowed. In five her chauffeur. The coachman used years, according to Mr. Balfour, an to be the favorite in this role, but ominous change had occurred. Mr. Balfour alleges that when another power has twenty-one Dreadnoughts completed we shall have but a superiority of four. The other power to which he refers has now got seventeen built or building, and no more than this number can now be completed before the close of the calendar year 1912. At that date we shall have twenty-five either completed or so near completion that they can be rapidly made ready for war. When the four of next year's programme of the foreign power to which Mr. Balfour refers come to be laid down, which cannot be until after the introduction of our own next year's estimates, it will be time enough to consider the rate at which our ships for the year should be built.

'I would remind Mr. Balfour that the Neptune, laid down at the beginning of 1909, has just gone through her trials, and that, when he reckons the number of ships which are building in foreign yards, he should take into account the rapidity with which they are in fact completed."

Mr. Balfour's effort to conjure up another German panic is the shift of a very hard-pressed party leader. He is under fire from a section of his own party who complain that he is not such as that is woman's paradise. There are houses whose internal arrangements

ALL SAINTS.

The Day of All Saints, or All Hallows, in old-fashioned speech, is an important festival in some of the churches, though somewhat cvershadowed in general observance by the day before. When the number of saints' days had grown to such proportions derpining. And it would be a marked as to threaten to absorb the whole calendar, the early church decided to fix the skirt grow as twins where now it is a day commemorative of "All the Saints," not specifically celebrated on days of their own. This was done about 610 A.D., the date first selected being May 1. Later on the feast was placed on Nov. 1.

There was a significance in these dates. One feature of the policy of the early Popes was to allow many of the pagan celebrations to be continued by the convertees, but with a new meaning. They prudently recognized that while you may change people's thoughts, it is very hard to change their habits of action. Two of the most popular festivals among the spring and fall revels of approximatespeech to a French-Canadian audience Highlanders kept up till last century their spring and fall "Beltane," i. e., originally, Fire in Honor of the God Bel, a bonfire being the centre of the magic rites. The utmost efforts of the church to transfer the people's attention on these occasions from gods and fairies and ghosts to All the Saints could not prevent the survival of the older ideas, though ever less serious, amidst the newer dispensation. A ludicrous blend of old and new was inded the result in the minds of the ignorant. In some parts of Scotland it was believed that if one rode astride a broomstick three times about the village on the evening of Oct. 31, he would be favored with a sight of the devil. Whether the inducement was too little or too great, it is said that

> At the present day the devils, ghosts and fairies have become a fading memery, and a jest of youthful gatherings. But the saints are still remembered, both by Roman Catholics. according to their Calendar, and by Protestants, who may think of all who
