EGGS AND POULTRY

Ducks are raised in immense numbers on farms along the canals and rivers of Central and South China, and are much more common than chickens. One of the customary sights along the Grand Canal in Mid-China, for example, is that of a Chinese duck farmer in his boat watching his flock feed in and along the canal. The ducks are trained to obey him, and, armed with a long bamboo pole to guide them, he controls their movements and takes them back to shelter for the night.

The surplus of poultry and poutry products which China can export annually is immense. Up to the present exportation has taken the form largely of egg products, mostly dried albumen and yolks. The trade in eggs and egg products is rapidly increasing, as may be seen from the fact that the exports of egg albumen and yolks in 1908 were valued at $483,038 gold, and the shipments of fresh and preserved eggs at valued at $463,038 gold, and the shipments of fresh and preserved eggs at $1,234,785 gold, while in 1999 the values were $818,829 and $1,529,685 respectively. During the last year several cargoes of Chinese meat and game products were sent to the United Kingdom with great success, and in these shipments were included poultry and eggs. The quantities of poultry thus exported, however, cannot be given with any degree of accuracy, since the returns include such products under the general term of "provisions". The appears is or geese—and certainly a large number of eggs.

For considerable portions of the population poultry is the only animal food used, and for the more well-to-do-classes it is an ordinary meat diet the year around. Ducks are pickled, dried tinned and otherwise preserved, and shipped to many parts of the world to Chinese who are away from a home supply. Eggs of all kinds are used fresh and are cured by burying in clay and lime until they acquire something of the quality of cheese, and are a great Chinese luxury.

There are few families in China, even in the larger cities, that do not have at least some chickens. Near the ports open to foreign trade there are a few rather good-sized poultry farms as a rule.

There are rejected in immense numbers.

Concerning Dissection.

Turning to the subject upon his mind, he said there was no need of making an applocy for the Bible. "In the last two weeks it was stated that the result of the scientific method of treating the Bible gave light, knowledge, made it a different book to what it was before the miscroscope and lancet of the critic got at it. "I dare say it does." said Mr. Blake, laughing, "but when any man says 'I take verses out and chapters here and there, and it's a better book,' I politicly say to him, "Thou liest."

Francis Wilson.

Theatregoers seem particularly well pleased with the efforts of the popular comedian, Francis Wilson, for both as author and as principal actor in his merry little comedy-farce, "The Bachelor's Baby," he has scored an unqualited success. The seat sale for his coming engagement opened this morning, and the interest was exceptionally keen, "The Bachelor's Baby," is in three acts, and while the star furnishes most of the fun, and laughing moments are very plentiful, a great deal of interest is centred around a little child, who, through force of circumstances the hero is forced to look after.
