The day before they were due in San Francisco they were all three sitting on camp stools upon the rear platform. The talk turned upon mining, and then, very smile naturally, to silver and coining. In reply to some question of Evelyn's Mr. Green started to give a very minute description of the process of coining money, and had just taken one of these bright half dollars from his pocket by way of illustration, when he caught the suspicious glare Mr. Hayes had turned on him. This young man was too well posted in the matter of dies and acids. Mr. Hayes watched him with excited conviction as growing first red, then white, he broke off in the middle of a sentence and then dropped the half dollar back into his pocket. " "Father? Bishop Medley, never wearied of telling the hey may, evading responsibility and punish experience of his early years of service. In ment by declaring they cannot help it, for those days the roads were in a very primitive condition and the country sparsely populated, rendering the journey from one woods settlement to another an unpleasant, not to say dangerous undertaking.

The Bishop, however, made periodical visits to the most outlaying parishes of his diocese in all seasons, and in the most inclem ent weather.

On one occasion, a violent storm being 1 progress, he was compelled to halt for the night at a log cabin by the roadside. A rough but hearty welcome was accorded him by the inhabitants, to whom he was un known. The man of the house at once busied himself with the care of the horses, while the woman set about the preparation of the vening meal. As the Bishop sat comfor tably by the fire, his thoughts were of his mission to that lonely neighborhood. "My good woman," said he, "are there

Kate Sanborn tells, in "Abandoning An same responsibilities. Nerves that are too sensitive to bear the noise and racket of Adopted Farm," a story of a big boy in a country school, who was clever enough in some studies, but hopelessly deficient in mathematics. The teacher, a man who had By all means set apart some portion of the little mercy on a stupid pupil, one day lost

The boy had failed to do a simple sum in subtraction, and the teacher rubbed out the proper place in the management of home figures on his slate, put down six ciphers, and six more under them. He drew a line handed the slate back to the dullard and said gravely: "There! See if you can subtract that."

The poor boy gazed stolidly at the new Every once in a winter not the source of the poor boy gates a sound of the source of t

It is an-questionably the fact that the feet and eyes are responsible for more suffering than any other portions of the human body. Possibly it is because they are the worse treated, and there may have been acquired or inherit-ed tendencies toward weakness. One would hardly think of attempting to change the shape of the head, but it wo ld be no more absurd than the practice o cramping the feet out of all symmetry and putting the nerves under a strain that cannot fail to prove disastrous to the entire physical economy. dam "if my brudder Sam vash an honest "Ill tell you how to find out if he is hon. est or not," responded Pete.
