Loyalty Welcomed at Halifax.

The welcome which Halifax extended to the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York on Saturday will live long in the memories of the people of the Province by the sea. From Citadel centre to all circumference points the city fairly pulsated with enthusiasm. Great demonstrations have been witnessed in that city many a time, but not since the Royal father of his Royal Highness landed in Halifax has there been such a general expression of loyalty to the Crown of England.

The Royal functions passed off most successfully and reflected the utmost credit upon those who directed the arrangements in that city. Nothing occurred to mar the welcome. The crowds were orderly in the highest degree. Troops lined the street throughout the three mile route of Royalty's procession, but they were not needed to ensure the safety of the honored Royal guests.

Along the whole route of the Royal procession was a perfect sea of faces, both sides of the street being filled with a mass of humanity. It was a scene never to be forgotten. As the Royal party came in sight, the crowd to watch the first glimpse of them sent up an enthusiastic cheer, which was caught up by the people further away and carried along the route. As their Excellencies approached, the soldiers who lined the streets came to attention and presented arms. The bands of the various regiments were stationed at various points along the line, and as the Royal party passed they played 4/4 bars of the National Anthem.

In front of Government House there were several Indian chiefs arrayed in their striking and picturesque native costume. The Royal British Veterans were stationed on Pleasant Street, near the Military arch, and they all wore their service medals. Among the number was Captain Douglas, R. N. R., and Lt.-Col. MacDonald.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was also a prominent figure in the procession, and at frequent intervals could be heard "Three cheers for Laurier."

Traffic on all the cross streets had been stopped early in the day, and the most perfect order prevailed throughout. There was little crowding or jostling, the immense crowd being perfectly orderly, and the best of good nature was evident everywhere.

Residential and mercantile windows were filled with people and in some of the latter stands had been erected. Movable stands were an innovation. Some enterprising individuals hired teams on which stands were built, and they were driven around to points of vantage.

Conspicuous among the many features of the reception was the military review, which took place on the Common, and was witnessed by thousands of people.

These soldiers of Canada down by the sea lacked perhaps the automatic precision which characterizes the well drilled regulars at Aldershot, England's great military camp, but they bore themselves bravely, marched well, and looked like men who would never flinch in the face of a foe. Every man was a soldier of the Empire wearing his uniform and bearing his arms to uphold the meteor flag.

The "march past" was led by the Blue jackets of the fleet, some two thousand men being in line. As the "men behind the guns" swung into line it was immediately evident that the tars are first in popular favor. Cheer after cheer resounded across the Common as the pick of the parade passed the saluting point. Whether ashore or afloat Jack does his work well. As one looked at the column of sailors and watched their white caps advance line upon line and company after company, there was a regularity that none of the other corps, good as they were, could attain. Their regularity gave a wave like motion to their line as they advanced, but it could not for one instant shake their formation. The marine companies were not a whit behind their shipmates in bearing and drill. Half wore the blue marines of the Royal Marine Artillery, the rest wore the red coats of the Royal Marine Light Infantry. Both contingents from the ships were greeted with hearty applause, which they thoroughly deserved.

The order of the march was as follows:

Royal Marine Band,
Blue Jackets.
Marine Artillery.
Marine Light Infantry.
Royal Garrison Artillery.
Royal Canadian Band.
Royal Canadian Regiment.
Royal Engineers.
9th Hussars mounted.
Newcastle Field Battery.
69th Battalion Band.
69th Battalion Infantry.
4th R. C. A. Band.
4th Regiment Canadian Artillery,
Charlottetown Engineers.
66th Fusiliers Band.
62nd Battalion Infantry.
63rd Rifles Band.
63rd Rifles Battalion.
78th Battalion Band.
78th Battalion Infantry.
42nd Battalion Infantry.
93rd Battalion Infantry.
Army Medical Corps.

All the regiments were cheered as they passed the grand stands. The Royal Engineers, Royal Artillery, Royal Canadians, Canadian Artillery, 66th P. L. F., and 63rd Rifles, being better known, were particularly singled out and they deserved all the cheers they got.

The cavalry also attracted much attention, the 8th Princess Louise Hussars, of Sussex, by their splendid horsemanship and soldierly bearing being loudly cheered.

After the whole of the troops were in line of quarter columns, the officers and colors took their post in review order. On the order of Colonel Biscoe they advanced. The Royal Marine Band played the advance and the troops were halted and stood at ease.

Then followed the presentation of colors to the 66th P. L. F. by his Royal Highness.

The troops were called to attention and as his Royal Highness left the grounds a Royal salute was given, after which the troops marched off to their respective quarters.

As the Duke rode away he passed the children's stand and children sang "The Maple Leaf," cheered wildly and waved their flags. Her Royal Highness followed in the Royal carriage and received a similar ovation.

Another interesting feature of the ceremony followed, namely, the presentation of medals for the South African campaign. His Royal Highness dismounted and took up his stand in front of the Royal pavilion. A line of the recipients was formed. No khaki was worn but the uniforms were varied and several were in mufti. First of all His Royal Highness presented the sword donated by Halifax friends, to Major H. B. Stairs, who also received his medal. The medals were handed by the Duke of Roxburghe to His Royal Highness, who placed them in the hands of the recipients.

Prince and people met at the reception held by the Duke and Duchess in the Legislative Council Chamber on Saturday night at 9.30. It was by far the most brilliant function ever held in Halifax. Over a thousand of the prominent citizens of the province were presented and the crowd which throng ed the Chamber and corridor was most dense.

The sight was unique for its splendor and its animation. From the moment the doors were thrown open for the Royal procession until after eleven o'clock there was a never-ending stream of humanity, which poured through in single file, without a moment's stop, and as rapidly as a handshake could be accomplished. It seemed that the end would never come. The chamber soon filled but the stream of splendidly-dressed men and women continued to pour in, while the gathering beyond the doors never seemed to lessen.

The restrictions of Court mourning necessitated quiet colors in the costumes but close observation showed the richness of the dresses and the splendor of the ornamente and trimmings, while scores of military men were present in full uniform.

Their Royal Highnesses stood throughout the entire reception, and not only never looked tired, but ever manifested signs of interest, bowing and smiling at every person who passed before them.

The laying of the corner stone of the monument erected to the memory of fallen heroes in South Africa—the first of the kind to be erected in the Empire—was a ceremony which had been looked forward to with a great deal of interest, and was witnessed by immense crowds. The silver trowel used by the Duke was a splendid piece of handiwork. A view of the monument, surrounded by a wreath of Mayflowers, was engraved on one side. On the reverse side was a suitable inscription. Hamilton McCarthy, the designer of the monument, was introduced to the Duke by Lord Minto, and presented His Royal Highness with a photograph of the monument.

The decorations and illuminations all over the city were very fine, and called forth many remarks of pleasure and admiration from the Royal party.

The illumination of the warships was the most magnificent sight ever seen in the city, and far surpassed any previous attempt in that line. Seven of the twelve ships in port were lit up. Thousands viewed the ships from the top of the Citadel, while Campbell Road, just north of the railway station, was packed with people who gazed on the "ships of fire" with exclamations of wonder and delight. At 9 o'clock the magnificence was added to by the turning on of the search lights on each ship, the long streams of electric brilliancy shooting into the heavens with dazzling effect. This was still further added to about 10 o'clock by a display of red and green rockets. It was a sight that will be remembered for years to come.

Both the Duke and Duchess endeared themselves to all who had the proud honour to be presented to them, and by their graciousness of manner and unaffected demeanor they captured the hearts of the plain people.

At the State dinner in Government House on Saturday evening, the Duchess expressed regret at leaving Halifax, and the unbounded admiration she had for Canada. She said that she would like to spend six months in Canada, as it was the best place she had seen.

The Ophir sailed from Halifax to Newfoundland, where a very short stop will be made, as important matters necessitate the Duke's early return to England.

Instructions for Grading and Packing Apples.

(Issued by The Ontario Exporters' Association.)

1. Take barrels to the orchard, hand-pick the apples, and fill the barrels from the baskets as they are brought from the ladders, putting the baskets down into the barrels, and turning them over with great care. Apples should not be picked on a hot day, nor if the apples are wet. Be particular not to pack any apples which have dropped from the trees. Haul to the barn immediately, and store the barrels on a dirt floor, if possible, as it is cooler and damper and better for the apples. Barrels should not be left in the orchard exposed to the hot sun and wet weather.

2. When you are ready for packing, take a table ten feet long by three feet wide, with side boards about eight inches high. Line the table with carpet or canvas, to prevent bruising the apples. Pour out three barrels on the table at a time. With two men to sort, use six baskets. Make at least three grades of apples, putting each grade into a separate basket.

3. First grade apples must be hand-picked from the tree, of good color and of normal shape and form, and at the time of picking free from the action of worms, defacement of surface and breaking of skin. The Ben Davis, Baldwin, Greenings, and other varieties kindred in size, must not be less than two and one half inches in diameter. The Russet, Jonathan, Spitz, and other varieties kindred in size, must not be less than two and one quarter inches in diameter.

Second grade apples must be hand picked from the tree and not smaller than two and one-quarter inches in diameter. The skin must not be broken or the apple bruised. This grade must be faced and packed with as much care as number one grade.

Third grade apples should never be packed for export.

4. To prepare the barrels. Tighten all hoops, nail them well, and clinch all nails on barrels. Mark on the end of the barrel with a clear stencil, (1) Shipper's name. (2) The Shipper's brand. (3) Grade of fruit. (4) Variety of fruit.

5. The barrel should be placed on a solid plank, and continually racked as each basket of apples is placed in the barrel. A piece of timber should be used for this purpose about two inches thick, and of such circumference as will fit nicely in the barrel without leaving too much space; it should be well padded to prevent cutting or bruising the apples.

6. In filling the barrels with different grades of apples, pick out well colored apples of normal shape and standard size; cut off all stems and set or face the heads of the barrel with them, leaving the very largest apples of each grade for the middle of the barrel, so that if a buyer turns out a barrel he will find the best apples in the centre.

7. Fill the barrels so full that the apples are level with the top of the staves, using the same grade of apples for tailing as are used for facing the barrels.

8. Press the apples first with the padded block, so tight that not an apple will move in the barrel, and then put in the head, nail hoops and securely fasten the heads with strips or liners.

9. Apple barrels when being hauled to the station should never be loaded on end, for in all cases it is bound to slacken the barrels.

A Colored Hero at Halifax.

Amongst those who took part in the reception at Halifax on Saturday was a very humble citizen of the Province in the person of a colored man named William Hall, who had been invited by the Royal British Veterans to take part in the reception as a guest of the Society. This man wears upon his breast, in addition to his other decorations, the much valued Victoria Cross—the only decoration that can be bestowed on a King, the courtier, and the humblest alike, provided he is in arms as a soldier of the King, whether volunteer, militiaman or regular, who does some deed of daring or glory in the face of the enemy.

It is free from political or social influence and the best evidence of that is that seaman William Hall, a poor colored lad, born in the little hamlet of Avonport, N. S., the son of an ex-slave, is the proud recipient of it in company with such men as Major General Sir Redvers Buller, Major-General James Blair, Major General Sir Christopher Teesdale, and others.

This man won his Cross in the Indian Mutiny, at a time when the question of India saved or India lost was in the balance, and it meant on this particular occasion, not only the loss of an army and the massacre of the men, but it meant the noble deed performed on that day by Seaman Hall, who saved the unfortunate women and children, not from death only, but from the fate of their unfortunate sisters previous to their mutilated bodies being thrown into the well at Cawnpore. Had Hall's attempt on that day failed, the fiendish Sepoys would have furnished to the world a tale of horror unsurpassed before or since.

Hall, in addition to the Victoria Cross, wears also the medal for the Indian Mutiny with the clasps of Lucknow and the Relief of Lucknow. He also saw hard fighting in the Crimea where much good service was performed. He wears the Crimean medal with the clasp for Inkerman and Sebastapol, as also the Turkish medal.

Hall enlisted in the Royal Navy at Liverpool in 1852, and was discharged with a good conduct certificate as quarter master after 22 years and 258 days service. He enjoys the special pension with the Victoria Cross. The naval pension and the Greenwich hospital pension altogether is about £70 sterling. He has left the sea and is settled on a little farm at Avonport Station, about 100 yards from the spot where he was born, and having never married he lives with his sister. Mr. Hall is the only known colored man who wears the Cross.

The Midland Railway.

In referring to the opening of this railway, the Hants Journal says:

"This has been realized the hopes of very many for a closer connection between the eastern and western sections of our county, as well as giving more rapid communication with the neighboring county of Colchester, and providing a more direct line than hitherto between the New England States and the county of Cape Breton.

"The line traverses a rich section of country, rich because of its agricultural capabilities, with possibilities for fruit growing not surpassed by the most fertile sections of the Annapolis Valley. The products of field and orchard will in the not distant future form an important feature in the freight business, and if the borings now in process for coal in Upper Kennetcook fulfil the expectations warranted by the work so far done, we shall have an important colliery in progress, to give employment to a large force of men, and to add greatly to the traffic of the line. These, with other natural products, such as lumber, cordwood, etc., should aggregate a good freight traffic, and eventually make the Midland Railway a grand success. That it is now accomplished after many years of anticipation, is indeed a glad event, and we join with our people generally in the earnest hope that the gentlemen who have invested capital in the undertaking will realize that it is as bread cast upon the waters, to return, not after many days, but in lesser time, to reward them for their enterprise."

Lord Kitchener, in a late report to the War Office, recently, says that since the last statement 26 Boers have been killed, 8 wounded, 194 prisoners have been taken, there have been 42 surrenders and 102 rifles and 2,200 horses have been captured.

It is stated the Imperial government is about to mount guns in the fort at Signal Hill, Esquimault, and when equipped will be the most formidable fort on the Pacific, being cut out of a solid mountain of granite, and the largest guns will be mounted there.

Dominion Parliament.

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—There will be no re-distribution bill at the approaching session of the Dominion Parliament. The information on which it must be based will hardly be ready in time to give the government much time to think over the subject.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to attend the coronation ceremony in June, and his colleagues will be anxious to have the business of parliament all disposed of by that season. Probably not a few of the more important members on both sides will feel like going over to witness the pageant. The redistribution of seats, when it is proposed, will be a matter sure to lead to the warmest order of debate, and if it were included in the programme for the next meeting, there would certainly be no getting away before summer.

With this out of the way, there cannot be any government legislation of paramount importance. The revision of the federal statutes from 1886 down is proceeding, and it will be for parliament to ratify the draft of the law officers who have this important charge in hand. But the task is one involving so much careful work that it can hardly be ready before the session after next.

The Afghan Frontier.

London, Oct. 18.—The Askabad correspondent of the Daily Telegraph asserts that the existing unrest and the possibility of disturbance on the Afghan side of Turkestan have induced the Russian war office to order the mobilization as speedily as possible of all the Cossack regiments in the Ural, Orenburg, and Semipalatchensk districts. The troops in the Caucasus district will not be moved at present, but they have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for mobilization. The Minister of War will visit all the Russian posts on the Afghan frontier to ascertain fully what steps are necessary for the defence of the frontier. These measures, adds the correspondent, clearly prove that everything is not so tranquil in Afghanistan as the telegrams from India seem to indicate.
