EGYPTIA HORRORS

Visitito a Madhouse where the Existence of Cholera was Suspected The following frightful description of a visit to an Egyptian machouse is taken from a letter by the Cairo correspondent of the Egyptian Gazette :--

Grave suspicions were entertained by many that the Government Lunatic Asylum, at Abbasseeyeb, was a hotbed of cholers, and that the existence of the disease within its walls was being concealed. No difficulty was made about my being admitted to the place. We were ushered through a deep, dismal archway into the recreation ground of the asylum, where the mad people were wandering in a solitary, parposeless way. Turning to the Joit beneath an arcade we entered a dark door-way, just as the last of a herd of idiots had been driven in before us. We took ten or fifteen strides along a sombre passage, and on reaching the wall made a quarter turn to the right and stood facing a long, lofty corridor, lighted only by a few small windows near the ceiling, secured by iron bars. All along this corridor, at the base of the wall on the left hand, the lunatics sat squatted on their haunches in a long and almost interminable row. To all appearance they were a quiet, inoffensive, miserable looking lot of creatures, literally clothed in eachcloth. Their only garment consisted of a coarse sackcloth shirt, descending to their knees, with an aparture through which to pass the head, and sleeves talling half way to HIGH SCIENTIFIC OPINIONS. the elbows. They had not a particle of linen about them. On our right were the bedrooms - lofty, spaclous, sombre apartments - entered through low doorways. The becateads were similar to those in use in the native hospitals and barracks-iron frames and planks. The bedding and bedclothes were filthy in the extreme, and swarming with vermin. Each room was clowded with beds placed about an arm's length from each other. The stench was intolerable, both in the apartments and the corridors. No regard was even paid to the most elementary notions of cleanliness. AN INSTRUMENT OF TORTURE. At length we reached what I can only describe as the chamber of horror-the apartment in which refractory patients were mastered and treated. It was a lofty, spacious room, with plenty of light. Here a most horrible sight greeted un All round the walls, at regular distances of about six feet, were arched cavities commencing at the ground and extending to a height of about two feet six inches. The extremities of a curved iron bar were firmly fixed in the masonry on either side of cach cavity. The purpose of this arrange-ment was as follows :-- When a man became violent he was placed, with his legs bound and with his back against the iron bar, in a sitting posture, his arms being firmly lashed to it. The cavity in the wall was supposed to prevent him injuring his head by swinging it backward and forward or by dashing it from side to side sgainst the masonry. As we entered this verifable torture chamber the first thing that met our gezo was a recumbont figure surrounded by three or four sttendants.

ON THE BACK.

We discovered a machine bearing a close resemblance to a weighing machine on the bascule principle, only that the bottom part, that upon which the goods are placed to be weighed, extended some three or lour feet from the back piece. The top of this back piece was padded to the depth of about a foot, the padded part being covered with red Morocco leather. On this machine was seated a patient, with the back of his head against the padding and his legs extended towards us. The three or four attendants by whom he was surrounded were engaged in binding his arms to rings Constitutions. --- When olimato, age, or bard-ships, have undermined the health, skin dis-The left side of this wretched being's head, cases are prone to arise and augment the ex- | at the height of the eyes, was covered with isting weakness. The appearance of this prison was filthy in the extreme. The stench was insufferable. The kitcher, which was close at hand, was a gloomy, dirty sort of place. The women's quarters were even worse than those of the men. They were very crowded, and their generally filthy condition is beyond description. Many of the women were has cost £45,000, which has been raised by a company formed in the country. The line, after passing through the principal street of Portrush, follows the seaside road, a footpath six feet broad being reserved for the railway. The gauge is only three feet, and the gradients are very steepin places as much as one in thirty-five-and in parts of its course the curves are sharper than might have been desirable had the route which it takes been chosen by the engineers. The force to work it is generated by a waterfall in the River Bush, with an available head of twenty-four test, the electric current being conveyed by an underground cable to the end of the tramway. The water power pass-ing through iurbine waterwheele, which ulilize the whole force of the fall, is said to amount to ninety horse. It is obvious that for a light train of tramcars there is enough and to spare. The practicability of such a line is now a settled matter. The only question is whether it is likely to pay as a commercial venture. Considering that the initial power costs nothing, and that coal in Iteland is dear, there are good hopes that a line certain to be freely used by the continuous stream of tourists always going between Portrush and Bushmills, on their way to the Giant's Causeway, will satisfy the expecttions of its projectors.

AN OFFICER MURDEBED.

Sr. Louis. Mo., Oct. 10-About five o'clock this alternoon a bloody murder was committed in this city, the victim being Sergeant P. M. Jenks, of the police force, and the perpstrator a notorious negro woman, known as Sadie Hill, an inhabitant of one of the moral plague spots of the city known as Olubber Alley, located in the Third police district. She is known as a most desperate character, and was only recently released from the workhouse, where she had served a term for knocking another woman over the head with a club, nearly killing her. To-day she had a quartel with her paramour, and, as she herself says, resolved to kill him. She has always carried a revolver. Having resolved to kill the man she drank heavily to bring her course up. Bergeant Jenks, who was at the station when word came that the woman was creating a disturbance, and started for the scene of the trouble, two blocks distant. He found the woman raving around like a wild beact, swearing that she would "Eat that man's heart." She carried her hat in her hand and under the bat she kept concealed her revolver.

She was at that time in Olabber alley, near Biddle street. Seeing Sergeant Jenks she dropped her hat and flourished the revolver over her head, still raving and cursing, but walked off as the Sergeant approached. Sho crossed Biddle street to a vacant lot, the officer walking toward her. A crowd gathered, and several persons warned theofficer toknock her down before she could shoot; but Jenks remarked, as he followed the woman :- "I never did hit a woman and I wont. Suddenly the woman whirled. and presenting her revolver full at the officer, said: -"Take that," at the same time pulling the trigger. Jenks jumped forward, and wus so close that when the bullet went orashing through his brain he fell forward upon the woman, his life's blood gushing out in a perfect torrent, giving the woman a terrible bath. She grabbed him by the collar and actually held him up until she could hit him two brutal blows over until she could hit him swo bright booms in the gutter. It was thought he head with the revolver, and than let him roll over in the gutter. It was thought he was dead; but when the city ambulance reached the scope he was found to be still breakhing. Cause .- The most important causes are a specialty of diseases of the air passages:

Symptoms-The most important symptoms are a regular couge, it may be very little, but at a certain time every day, generally in the moruing upon rising, sometimes upon lying down, expectoration of white, fromy material or a yellowish substance, sometimes mixed with blood, shortness of breath upon exertion, night sweate, chills and fever, the chills generally being irregular, but the fever regular at a certain time every day. The temperature rises slowly but surely in con-sumption. The pulse is frequent and feeble, the patient becomes emaciated and weak, the eyes are sunken, the nose pinched, and a peculiar appearance is given to the mouth in advanced cases which cannot be mistaken by an experienced eye, and lastly, but not least, the voice has a changed and peculiar sound which epeaks very positively to the specialist (who sees so many cases), and who becomes so familiar with the sounds articulated. This is a disease not to be trified with. On the first indication of anything that would lead to consumption, have it attended to. And don't despair even if your family physician tells you that you are beyond help. With our present knowledge of the new and scientific modes of treating dis. ease, applying the medicine directly to the part affected, instead of pouring drugs into the stomach, hundreds of cases are being cured that are even far advanced in consump tion and pronounced beyond the skill of man

Our treatment for asthma has for its object the removal of the cause, the principal of which is a catarrhal inflammation of the mucus membrane lining the bronchial tubes and air cells, and of the nasal mucus membrane and larynx in many cases, and not simply giving anti-spasmodics to relieve the psroxysm. This latter will only relieve the spasm-not oure. Our applications contain medicines which will not only relieve the spasm, but also remove the inflammation, which is the principal cause. When the cause is complicated with derangement of the blood, the stomach or the heart, we give suitable remedies to remove those causes also. Our treatment will cure asthma, not simply relieve it.

Physicians and sufferers are invited to try the instruments at the offices free of charge. Persons unable to visit the Institutes can be successfully treated by letter addressed to the International Throat and Lung Institute 13 Phillips' Square, Montreal, or 173 Church street, Toronto, where French and English 12-45.2. specialists are in charge.
