Annador Trading is a leading Canadian producer of limited edition collectables. We have worked with some of Canada's finest artists to capture their work on porcelain. Norval Morriseau, Ken Danby, Nori Peter, Michael Dumas and Fred Neubacher are some of the noted artists who have produced work specifically for us to re-create for the collector plate market.

Most of our current series features distinctively Canadian wildlife scenes by Fred Neubacher and Michael Dumas, and the traditional Inuit depictions of Nori Peter.

Our company also undertakes custom production of plates, mugs and other porcelain pieces. We use artwork supplied by the client, or custom-designed by our own experienced artists.

Collectables produced by Annador Trading are totally made in Canada and have won several international design awards. Annador Trading serves the complete Canadian collectable market, and exports throughout the United States.

Limited edition porcelain pieces feature prominent Canadian artists.

Arctic Trading, located on the shores of Hudson's Bay, specializes in unique northern arts and crafts. We have produced two award-winning catalogues, including an 82-page, hard cover, limited edition featuring our finest wares.

We have revived native arts, such as Eskimo carving, beading, quill work and caribou hair tufting. . . a technique of dying, knotting and shaping hair on velvet. The resulting special line of highly marketable framed floral patterns is mass produced and very affordable.

One of our talented artisans, Myrtle de Meulles, has developed sculptures of northern scenes carved from caribou hair on the hide.

Another major production area comprises mocassins, fur mittens and gauntlets. We have developed our own footwear water-proofing system, TUNDRA-TREAD.

Arctic Trading procures northern treasures, including polar bear hides, narwhale tusks and walrus ivory. Thus, we deal with many native peoples and proudly serve as a bridge between North and South.

Lively arrangement in natural Caribou hair depicts northern owl as one of many traditional native art objects.
