

But man in health is surely not less an important object of contemplation, and in a sound condition he is the standard by which we measure all deviation from normal condition in each person.

Such being the case, the writer has taken this opportunity to add his humble contribution to this vast subject. There are many in this Association who doubtless differ from him, being ardent followers of the so-called New Psychology, but he is sure that they will appreciate his convictions, come from whom they may, even if uttered by those who may be considered too conservative in their opinions, in this age of advanced thought.
