

200 WAR THOUGHTS OF AN OPTIMIST

continue to send forth their dearest and nearest, bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh, at the call of duty. May those of us who cannot share in the battle-lines themselves be worthy of the heroes who have gone, and in our turn do what we can for the world we love, the welfare of which has been so gloriously supported by the blood of those who have fallen at Langemarck.

May 1915.