Guilbert Was Diplomatic.

Then Dr. Beland proceeded to give to the house a story of the Drummond-Arthabaska campaign, as he saw it. Mr. Guilbert, he said, presented himself to the electors as a Liberal, who would support Sir Wilfrid Laurier on all questions but that of the may. He was more of a Liberal in Liberal centres than in Conservative. In the latter he would throw blame on the administration.

Armand Lavergne had said at sev-

Armand Lavergne had said at several meetings that the only way to please Sir Wilfrid Laurier was to vote please Sir Wilfrid Laurier was to vote for Guilbert, because, when the Nationalist candidate was elected, he would be able to go to Earl Grey and Mr. Borden and say: "See, the people have declared themselves against the naval policy. We must repeal the bill." Then the Nationalists had appealed to the instincts of the electors and nad tried to frighten fathers and mothers by the bogey of conscription.
Dr. Beland said that sixty-seven speakers had appeared in the constitu-ency in support of Mr. Guilbert, in addition to thirty-three organizers and four would-be census officers. These alleged census officers went from house to house, telling the people that if they decided in favor of the naval policy, the first recruiting would be done in that constituency.

He combated the assertion that the enstituency had always been strongly Liberal, pointing out that in 1908 the County of Arthabaska gave a Liberal majority of only four.

Canada Must Have Navy. Dr. Beland said that, notwithstand-ing what had been said in the by-eleccontest, every member ouse, whether Conservative, Liberal or Nationalist, was willing to agree that Canada must have a navy. The Conservative policy had been for a contribution to the imperial navy, or for a navy which would always bat at the disposal of the admiralty. The Liberal party was for a navy which would be subject to the control of the Canadian parliament. The Nationalists were for a navy which would not leave our shores. In the by-election campaign Mr. Monk and his friends had declared that they would favor a Canadian navy that would be kept at home at all times and never share in an imperial lic to patronize such a great artist as Gogorza unquestionably is. However it be, those who came were enthusias-tic beyond measure, and the recalls after each suite were numerous and insistent. Mr. Gogorza only responded vocally to one of these tributes. He had given a generous program, and there was no churlishness in his refusal. He was received with prolonged applause on appearing, and opened the applause on appearing, and opened the concert with the lovely Handel-like phrases of Giordani's "Caro mio ben." In ease of production, richness and depth of quality, freedom from all the frequent defects of the modern vocalist, such as vibrato and slur, with the absence of anything approaching harshness in the most forceful passages, and with faithfully intelligent and dramatic renderings, there are few baritones equally equipped before the public to-day. The "Cecilia" number evoked great applause. Very charming was the English group. At once delicate and manly in "Drink to Me Only," he was rarely expressive in "Thou Art So Like a Flower" (Hadley), and Hammond's setting of a version of Heine's weird "Ballad of the Bony Fiddler" had a flavor of the "Erl King." The florid vocalization of "The Lark Now Leaves fler Wat'ry Nest," was superbly done. In response to the repeated encores of Massenet's aria from the "Roi de Lahore," of which he gave a highly dramatic rendering, he sang Tours' setting of "Mother o' Mine," and with deep pathos.
