THE ARRIVAL OF DREYFUS

Driven From the Railway to Prison at Breakneck Speed.

Pathetic Meeting Between the Prisoner and His Wife.

Rennes, July 1.-Dreyfus, on arrival here, appeared to be in good health. His hair is turning gray, but he held himself very erect.

The clock was striking 6 when the crowd, which had been waiting since midnight around the prison, the people beginning to think themselves the victims of a practical joke, saw a landau surrounded by gendarmes beyond the station. Then they all cried with one voice:

"THERE HE IS!"

At this cry the police started off to meet the carriage, and suddenly the troops and mounted gendarmes hurried madly forward, yelling and shouting as if accompanying a fire engine instead of escorting a prisoner. The carriage was driven so fast that it covered the distance in a few minutes, passing the watchers like a flash. It was a race for the prison gates between the gendarmes with the captive and the spectators. The gates then opened suddenly, and about twenty gendamnes rushed out and barred the street, pressing back the crowd with rifle-stocks. The transformation from tranquility to a wild scene of gesticulation aimost defies description. The suddenness of the movement stupefied everybody as much as it did the prisoner, whose face showed quickly-passing carriage. But beyond the exclamations of surprise and curiosity, there were no cries of any

Preceded by his guards, Dreyfus entered the prison, and was formally consigned to the care of the governor. MEETING OF HUSBAND AND WIFE

The governor of the prison sent Madame Dreyfus the news of the arrival of her husband, and she immediately went to the governor and asked permission to see the prisoner. Leave this morning on a two months' visit being granted, the faithful wife entered the prison almost unobserved, and was conducted to cell No. 830, accompanied by Madame Havea. The meeting between the long-parted husband and wife can better be imagined than described.

Up to noon there has been no sign of a public demonstration.

TRY FOOT ELM DOMINION DAY.

The Situation to Date.

There are few vassals of the Company in the present City Council. There will probably be fewer in the next.

The position of Mr. Everett, the controlling holder of the London Street Railway stock, is somewhat that of an Irish absentee landlord, draining every dollar he can from an estate, to be spent abroad. All London gets out of the franchise is the amount men receive in wages; hence it is clearly the interest of the city that the men should receive not only good treatment but good wages.

The Company, through their solicitor, are again insidious in endeavor to load up public opinion against organized labor. Driven from the cutand-dried interview and the anonymous letter methods, the method now appears to be the preparation, for publication in connection with the city council committee, of well-prepared statements, designed to make the worse appear the better cause. This was shown by the Company yesterday in their reluctance to proceed until their special press representative could be telephoned for.

The point upon which the Company, through its solicitor, have most descanted of late, is the impossibility of Mr. Everett being so unfeeling as to give back their jobs to the old hands, at the expense of the temporary men who replaced them. Is anybody likely to be taken in by these belated professions of tenderheartedness from a corporation that reduced the wages of the regular men last autumn, and would probably sacrifice half the city without compunction for an extra dollar of profit? When a corporation solicitor drops into the weepy, in the course of a carefully prepared professional address, at so much per weep, itemized, buncombe can hardly

The Company may say they will continue, at all hazards, to give preference to the temporary non-union men, over their old men whose places the former were content to take. But the vast mass of the people of London take a different view, and show it by refusing to ride. They feel the Company are themselves chiefly to blame for the significant record of two strikes in less than a year. The public believe the present situation the outcome of an attempt on the part of the Company and its instruments, to destroy, for selfish reasons, the unity

The Advertiser believes it speaks in the interests alike of the Company and of the men's Association when it advises that the men should be reinstated, organized labor frankly recognized, and arrangements made as to the future for the protection of each side and interest by arbitration. The Company should pause before making the mistake of t_king up an impossible position, and leaving themselves no door of withdrawal.

MAKES A CHANGE

Mr. Blair's Amendment to the Intercolonial-Grand Trunk Agreement.

Ottawa, July 1.-Last night it was decided by the minister of railways that an important change should be made in the Intercolonial-Grand Trunk railway agreement. The alteration in question will do something, if the phrase be allowable, to make an already perfect compact more perfect. In place of clause 40, which provides that the freight traffic transfer clause shall remain in force for 99 years, the agreement is to be so amended as to give the minister of railways power at time terminate the freight transfer agreement, upon giving the Grand Trunk people one year's notice. The Grand Trunk will have no option in the matter, and on their part will be powerless to initiate any change.

> A Promising Proposal From the Men Proves Fruitless, as the Company Will Make No Concession-Dominion Day Celebration at Queen's Park-Strike Notes.

Conferences of the strike committee with the street railway company and the men again took place at the city hall this morning. At the outset there seemed to be bright prospects for a speedy settlement of the strike. The strikers had intimated through Chairman Parnell that if the company would meet them on the question of the return of all the men they would see what could be done about waiving the recognition of the union as set forth in their proposed agreement. This understanding was arrived at during a meeting with the men. While the a meeting with the men. While the committee presented this proposition to the company, the men's committee was in readiness to be called at any time, in case the company were at all conciliatory. But there was no reason for calling them. Mutual ground was not touched. The company refused posi-tively to do any better than the offer made yesterday, which was as follows: "1. The company are prepared to take back about 40 per cent of the men now on strike, in addition to the 23 old employes now in their employ, or about 30 more men.

"2. The company have no objection to any man in their employ belonging to a union. "3. The company will not consent to any man in their employ being compelled to join a union. "4. The company will agree to submit all grievances, past, present or future to a board of arbitrators, to be appointed under the arbitration act of the local legislature. "5. The company consider the wages now paid are as large as they can afford to pay, but will agree that all men who shall be in the employ of the company at the close of this strike, including those who are taken back, shall be paid the uniform wage of 151/2 cents per hour, without grading or sliding scale. "6 The company are willing to give the preference to their late employes where vacancies occur. "7. The company agree to give to the corporation of the city of London for the due fulfillment of the above proposition, an agreement to the above ef-

When the men's committee was met subsequently they said there was no-thing to discuss, if that was all the company had to say. They could not Brantford, Woodstock, Ingersoll and St. Thomas unions have also been in-Mr. A. B. Cox, the president of the board of trade, and the president of the Trades and Labor Council.

When Chairman Parnell presented the men's latest proposition to the company, Mr. Hellmuth said emphatically that the company would not displace any of the new men.

Ald. Parnell appreciated the company's position and considered fully what they said about their right to be loyal to the present employes. he said, "it would be hard to make the public believe that 100 men placed their families in want without cause. of the opinion there must have been a cause.

Mr. W. M. Spencer, one of the direc tors, did not see how in common sense they could displace for those who became strikers those who became workers.

The new men were spoken of highly by the directors. Ald. Wilkey wanted to know if their characters had been investigated, and Mr. Smallman replied that if the aldermen knew anything against them it was their duty as representatives of the citizens to point it out. The aldermen continued smiling, and the subject was changed.

A straight question was put to Mr. Smallman by Chairman Parnell, as follows: "Suppose those men as a body could demonstrate to a board of arbitrators that there was sufficient cause for them going out, would you take them all back?"

Mr. Smallman replied that the company on no condition would displace the present employes; also that an offer had been made by the company to arbitrate all individual grievances. Ald. Parnell-Yes, individual grievances. You persist in dealing with them individually, and we want you to deal with them collectively. Demonstrate by arbitration there no just cause for the strike, and your position will be stronger. The company's representatives reiterated their statement about not being able to displace any new men, and that the strikers brought their present position upon themselves.

Ald. Parnell-But you shouldn't have given a first cause. The discussion was kept along the line of arbitration for some time. The chairman thought the strike would be justified if it were shown by arbitration that the management had been of such an arbitrary character that the men could not bear with it.

Mr. Hellmuth said: "No; under the first agreement there should have been an appeal to the board of directors if an employe was dissatisfied with the management." It was elicited that one case had been before the management, and six or seven appeals had been made, six or seven days before the strike. From the time the appeals were made until a strike, a meeting of the board was not held, said Mr. Carr.

At the meeting with the men later, the committee was informed that seven or eight appeals had been made on April 20, and that a meeting of the board had been held, but the appeals were not heard. Mr. Carr, in summing up the company's position, said: "The men will have, through you, a definite proposition. I have delayed engaging men all week. I was to see the applicants this afternoon, but will now put them off until Tuesday morning. The door will be left open for the strikers until Monday night."

The band concert at Victoria Park last evening for the benefit of the striking street railway employes was enjoyed by thousands of citizens, and the proceeds handsomely supplemented the strike fund. Evans, the highly efficient conductor, is to be congratulated on the high standard attain-

The company can do it, if they want to, as a means of settling a strike. If the public will not ride on the cars so long as the present men are taking the places of the old men, why should the company act so unbusinesslike as to keep them on? But the company, as they could well afford, should deal generously with the temporary men, who should get full wages up to Saturday night, and a fair sum in pocket besides. It is nonsense to say the company cannot do this if they want to."

W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes, left the city at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He said he was well satisfied with the situation here and the firmness shown by the strikers, and he considered the local committee was quite capable of handling the strike without his presence.
