Winter's Breaking!
So's Prices!

NOW TO MAKE WAY FOR SPRINGTIME

The past few days have indeed been a forerunner of an early spring. The snow and ice is disappearing with a decidedly higher temperature, and bids promise of being the advance agent for the beautiful spring days to come.

With the higher temperature comes lower prices, because we're surely pinched for room for our new spring stocks which are arriving daily. Naturally we put the knife still deeper into regular prices and sale prices too for the last few weeks of our mighty Whale of a Sale.

"The Drummer Boy" have been supplied by one of the Advertiser's oldest readers, but we're always glad to hear from "Sunny Kent." Those chitblains remedies sound like real "grandmother" cures, too.

Likes Winter, But—Dear Miss Grey—Am enclosing the words of two songs, "The Dying Nun" for "A Winter Frolic," and "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" for "Babe, I." I am sorry to say I haven't the other one she asks for, but may be someone else can oblige her.

How do you like the change of temperature? It suits me fine. I like the winter, but it has been so dreadfully cold all winter that I am just a wee bit tired of it.

Ans.—We quite agree, Bernice, on the advantage of the rising mercury. Did not the "ads" for the sunny south resorts sound tempting on the zero days? Much obliged to you for copying the two songs.

Wants Gluten Flour.—Dear Miss Grey—Can you tell me where gluten flour is manufactured? It is used by people suffering from diabetes. It can be obtained from wholesale druggists, but, as we would like to procure a quantity, we would be glad to have the name of the firm that makes it. Very sincerely, BRIDGET.

Ans.—Should fancy you'd be able to procure this through any of our city flour and feed stores. Have you inquired there?

Babies And Vegetables.—Dear Miss Grey—Just a little place, please, to answer Mrs. Newby's letter. This is what I had for my baby and found it plenty. I used flannel instead of flannel and like it.

By Cliff Sterrett.

What would you think of a man who is always trying to make people believe he is patriotic, yet putting away one and a-half tons of flour, so he would not have to eat war bread? There is only four in the family; he is a rich man and lives in town, which the farmers grow the wheat and no one around here has enough flour to last them till spring.

Ans.—Mrs. Newby, I hope you do not miss Muggins' kind and practical advice given for your vegetable canning. Am glad to be able to reprint the desired recipe for vegetable canning.

"Lassie," I think, was the gender of the method last summer.

"I saw where one of the readers of your page was asking for a recipe for canning peas and other vegetables. Here is one that is tried and true, and is good for corn, peas and beans. Nine cups of corn, peas or beans; one cup of sugar, one-half cup salt, one pint of hot water, set where it will heat gradually, then boil five minutes. Drain again; then season. This has been used for years and is always good, and does not take so much fuel as using the boiler on a warm day."
