THE IMPERIAL THEATRE in presenting this intimate picture of business life in the clothing manufacturing of New York is not caricaturing the Hebrew people in the least. On the other hand it exposes a fine strain of kindness and logic that makes one feel good. Mr. Bernard is of course the dominant figure and to say he is a rare joy is putting it mildly. The cast includes L. Rogers Lytton, Jimmy Morrison, Mary Maurice, Mrs. Moscovitz ("Potash & Perlmutter" Co.), Edward Elias and numerous others. The story deals with a half million dollar clothing order for the Allied Armies in which Scotland Yard detectives take a lively hand. This picture is something out of the ordinary, see it.

'Speeding Up' After War

Better Work—And Pay

(By Principal L. P. Jacks, L.L.D., in the "Daily News and Leader," London)
When the war is over the question which is certain to receive most attention, though I am far from regarding it as the most important, will be that of the economic damage of the war, which if it were expressed in figures would be as "unrealizable by us as are the distances of the fixed stars."

There is an enormous reserve of unused labor force in the world which it were turned into channels of industrial production would produce amazing results and soon wipe out the economic losses, incalculable as these have been. In this country there is a multitude of people who in normal times produce nothing in the economic sense. On the other hand, the labor force in actual employment is far indeed from reaching the maximum of its potential energy. The rule of labor is a fact—rather "do as little as you need," than "do as much as you can"—witness the agitation in all trades, for shorter hours.

Imagine this rule reversed—people eager and willing to work to the limit of their physical energies, in order to retrieve the losses of the war, trade unions adopting a policy to that effect, and can we doubt that the losses would soon be made good. A similar result would follow if with their actual increase in the hours of work there were a general understanding that every worker made the most of his time, "putting his back into it," as we say, and leaving as little as possible to be done tomorrow, or done by somebody else. Add to this a general resolution to make the work done as thorough as possible, and not only would there be direct economic gain on an enormous scale, but a vast army of foremen, overseers, and others now employed in preventing the unproductiveness of others might themselves become productive. If there exists in the country any party—Labor Party or other—who have it in their power to bring about these things, that party can repair when they will the economic damage done by the war. I am not pleading with them to take that course, but again merely stating the fact that the power to take it is theirs. Of all the great problems awaiting us after the war this of economic repair is perhaps the easiest of solution—if people have a mind. It can be done, and done quickly.

The Victims of Habit
But the problem is not so simple as that. It is complicated by a host of moral considerations of a most perplexing kind. If the alternatives before a man or a class of men were simply of being a wealth producer on the one hand, or an idler on the other, the latter alternative is morally the worse. But the man who is a mere "economic machine" is still more morally a danger to himself. He is engaged in making money. When a man's alternative to work is to loaf, or a free meeting, or a public house, or pacing the streets, or lounging about a fifty slum—if he is the least thoughtful, he will choose the latter. This is not meant that we wish him to be a slave, but that we do not wish him to be something worse. I will go a little further. Until all classes have learnt to make a better use of their leisure, or rather of their time, than they were making before the war, I am inclined to think that a period, not necessarily a long one, of Egyptian toil would be for our moral good. Many, of course, were already working up to the limits of their working powers, and for them exception must be made; but the community as a whole was not working—far from it. All classes in the community were becoming the victims of habits of one kind or another, which from the social point of view are thoroughly bad, and I for one, though none

Well-Expanded Lungs Not Enough
Pure blood is indispensable to the health and strength of the lungs. The delicate structure of these organs makes them susceptible to injury. When the lungs lose their tone, and even if they are permitted to expand freely, they have not the power fully to perform their important work. The fact is, there is nothing more necessary in physical economy than pure blood. The blood of blood that Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies. It is a real fighting man from Ireland. I have been with him now registered with the Guards, has a long and creditable military experience, which began in 1895, included service with Lord Kitchener in Egypt, and recently ended, for a time, at Giverny in the present war. Garrett joined the 1st King's Liverpool Regiment as soon as war was declared, and saw some of the hardest campaigning in France. During two years' service he was wounded eight times, with six wounds in the head and two in the legs. For conspicuous bravery at Giverny he was granted the Distinguished Conduct Medal by the British government and the Médaille Militaire by the French. In addition to this, he holds both Sudan medals and the King's and Queen's medals for the South African war.

SOLDIERS' WIVES SHOULD NOT FOLLOW THEM ACROSS

Soldiers' wives should not go to England. Many now there are forced to appeal to charitable societies for relief. They have lately come to the Canadian Patriotic Fund from soldiers' wives voicing regret that they ever left their homes in Canada. A letter from Lady Julia Drummond says that the treasurer of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association is overwhelmed with applications from the stranded wives of Canadian soldiers. The wives of soldiers are urged to remain in Canada, for the conditions in England are wholly different, and the fact that so many women now there are stranded should be a warning to those who are contemplating or thinking of following their husbands overseas.

$47,000,000 TO THE PRESS?

German Socialists to Ask About Expenditures in Neutral Lands

London, Oct. 14.—According to a Berlin telegram in the Wireless Press, German Socialists are planning to interpolate Councillor von Bethmann Hallwig in regard to allegations that 200,000,000 marks ($47,000,000) was spent for newspaper propaganda in the first two years of the war. One of the speakers is said to have been in America, and large sums in Greece and Turkey.

The dispatch says explanations will be demanded as to what value has been received. It is reported that the propaganda began to examine the old man's foot. And the old man used bad language, and wound up with an angry "Why don't you strike at the root of the matter and get me better?" Without a word, the man picked up his walking stick and shattered a decanter of port wine which stood on the table. With a yelp of wrath and a snarl, the old man sprang to his feet. "What did ye do that for?" he demanded fiercely. "Och," replied the doctor, "a blunt old chap, 'I was just striking at the root."

Striking at the Root

It was hard lines on old MacTammart, the Laird of Tullihidley. He was keen to be out and about his business, and here he was laid up with a bad attack of gout. The local doctor came, and of course began to examine the old man's foot. And the old man used bad language, and wound up with an angry "Why don't you strike at the root of the matter and get me better?" Without a word, the man picked up his walking stick and shattered a decanter of port wine which stood on the table. With a yelp of wrath and a snarl, the old man sprang to his feet. "What did ye do that for?" he demanded fiercely. "Och," replied the doctor, "a blunt old chap, 'I was just striking at the root."

CONDON-WALLACE BOUT A DRAW

Cutting out a fast pace from start to finish, Eddie Wallace and Harry Condon went ten rounds to a draw last night at Sohmer Park, Montreal, before the members of the Canadian Hockey Club. The bout was a clever exhibition. Condon is the more rugged of the two, and depends on his lightning to carry him to victory, while Wallace is the more skilled boxer, and through this held his own against his opponent.

Boxer in Khaki

Another boxing champion, who has a record with the gloves, and an even better one as a soldier of the King, joined the 24th Canadian Grenadier Guards this week in Montreal. This was Charles Garrett, who is known to fame in the squared circle as "Twin" Sullivan, and is a real fighting man from Ireland.

Money-Winning Drivers

Cox and Murphy are having a pretty contest for top berth in the list of money winning drivers. Both reinmen are now around the $25,000 mark. The injury to Geers, which gave St. Prisco and Napoleon Direct to Murphy may prove to have been the determining factor.—Boston Globe.

The double empire system was adopted by the three eye league at the annual fall meeting of its club owners in Chicago on October 12. One hundred and twenty-six games instead of 140 will be played.

Twenty-two players of the Boston Red Sox yesterday received full shares of $8,926.25 each, including several who had figured but little in the team's success. The remainder of what the team won, $97,766.47 was divided among the other substitutes and club employees. The meeting was marked by the farewell of Manager Carrigan, who has played

GERMANS MOVING MORE GUNS

They Keep Them, However, About Five Miles Behind the Somme Front.

With the French Armies, Oct. 14.—Although the Germans at present show no sign of general retreat to a shorter line, they evidently are becoming more and more alarmed at the success which attends the French attacks after mechanical artillery bombardments. They certainly are taking steps to retreat if it should become necessary to do so. But, on the other hand, they mean to try their utmost to hold on along the Peronne-Papaume front until winter. They have brought up a great deal of fresh artillery, especially heavy guns, and showed no shortage of ammunition throughout recent operations. To show how the Germans fear the rapid French infantry attacks, they now have taken their heavy guns a long way behind their front line. There is now none nearer than five miles. They evidently mean to do their utmost to save their heavy artillery.

NEW LOAN IN RUSSIA

Denial That a Great Issue is to Be Made in the United States

Petrograd, Oct. 14.—Interesting statements regarding Russia's present financial position have been made by M. N. Nikiforoff, director of credit at the chancellerie. He is a representative of the Russian State. The ministry purposes to issue in November a new loan of 8,000,000,000 rubles at the same rate as the two previous war loans. There is no question at present of further foreign loans.

"During M. Bark's last journey abroad," said M. Nikiforoff, "all necessary credit operations were successfully arranged, and any new operations are a question of the more distant future. In America the government has already raised a small loan of 150,000,000 rubles and intends to maintain connection with American financiers in the future, but the rumor of a coming American loan of 8,000,000,000 rubles is entirely untrue."

An interesting feature of the meeting of the council of the Board of Trade yesterday was the proposal that, within the very near future, the members of the council of the board pay a visit to Halifax. The proposal was met with favor. The matter stands over until next meeting.

WOULD-BE SPORTS.

(Contributed.)
They have time to watch the bulletin boards

For the ball game's latest score;
They have money to bet on the number of runs

And victory minus gore.

They weary not of the wind and rain,
As the wires come thick and fast
Do they ever think of the boys away,
Playing a man's game to the last?

They're a quarter for every pool that's made;
But, oh! what a grudging sigh,
When lottery tickets must be sold
And when they're asked to buy,

To swell the fund for wounded men,
Who once were fit as they,
But could not play the quitter's part
When the Huns drank "To the Day!"

They think they are sports—poor sports,
I say,
For they won't take a chance and go
To the biggest game that was ever played

Since England had a foe.

To the fit and independent men
I offer this challenge bold:
Go, watch the game from the front line
Trench, and Britain's honor uphold!

SHARK KILLS A FISHERMAN

Florida Man's Leg Lacerated by Monster Caught in a Net

West Palm Beach, Oct. 14.—J. L. Hanson died in a hospital at Fort Pierce as the result of being attacked by a shark at Sewells Point, near Palm Beach. He was assisting some fishermen in hauling in a fishing net, when a large shark was found entangled in the mesh.

Hanson jumped into the net and attempted to take the monster by the tail. The struggle which followed the shark seized Hanson's right leg and severely mangled it.

Hanson was rushed to the hospital in an automobile by a party of tourists passing at the time. His lacerated leg was amputated, but he died a short time afterward from loss of blood.
