British Dominate Bapaume; Thiepval Is Enveloped

New York, Aug. 23.—The Associated Press tonight issues the following: Over the fifty-mile battlefield from the region of Arras to the north of Soissons the German armies are meeting with defeats which apparently spell disaster. Everywhere the British and French forces have continued on the attack the enemy has been singularly worsted. And the end of his trials is not yet in sight. To the British over the thirty miles of the fighting zone from the Cojeud river southeast of Arras to Libons south of the Somme numerous towns have fallen and enemy territory has been penetrated to a depth of several miles. Where the French are fighting between the Matz river and the territory north of Soissons additional goodly gains have been made in the envelopment of Noyon and the general manoeuvre which seeks to crush or drive out the Germans from the salient between the Somme and the Ailette and to put into jeopardy the entire German line running to Rheims.

RESERVES FAIL TO STEM TIDE
Notwithstanding the fact that the Germans brought up large numbers of fresh reinforcements in an endeavor to stay the progress of Haig's armies, their efforts were without avail. Where they were able momentarily to hold back their oncoming foes the Germans finally were forced to cede the ground demanded. And they paid a terrible price in men killed, wounded or made prisoners for their territory.

The entire Arras-Albert road has been crossed by the British. The strongly held positions where the Germans saw disaster facing if they fell were stormed and captured and the British passed them going eastward. Notable among these places were Achiet-Le-Grand, where bitter fighting has been in progress for several days; Bonyelles and Gomlecourt, northeast of Albert. The taking of Achiet, and farther east of the town of Bihucourt, gives Haig a dominating position over Bapaume, from which the railway and highway runs eastward to Cambrai. Farther south the old fortress of Thiepval is surrounded on three sides and its capture must follow.

Friday night saw the British standing well to the east of Albert, and south of the Somme they were holding Chignolles and Chignacs and had thrown out forces eastward to outflank Bray on the south and Chaulnes on the north. Midway of the battle line south of the Somme around Roye, there has been little fighting, the Allied commander evidently reasoning that with both wings of his offensive—near Arras and Soissons—working smoothly in the movement which is likely to compel the Germans to seek refuge behind their automatic ally in order to save large numbers of men, guns and supplies from capture.

FRENCH IN POSITION TO STRIKE
With the continuation of the French drive from the Matz river around the bend in the line to the north of Soissons, however, north of Soissons, the Germans still within the lower portion of the old salient apparently are on dangerous ground. The French are still busily engaged in their drive in this region. They have crossed the Divette river near Evricourt and at several other points have forced the Ailette and the Oise and north of Soissons are standing east of Bagnoux and to the west of Crecy-Au-Mont. A swift turning movement across the Oise from the latter region would be likely to work havoc with the Germans in this sector.

Although the Americans at the commencement of the Somme offensive were brigaded with the British along the northern bank of the Somme, no mention of their having taken part in the fighting has been made. It is probable that they have been moved to some other portion of the battlefield from which Marshal Foch contemplates another smash at the enemy.
