POLICEMAN DEAD IN PARK

Run Down by Auto and Belief is Chauffeur Did it Purposely

New York, Nov. 1.—The body of Policeman Peter Fitzsimmons of the Central Park Squad was found early today lying across a sidewalk near the Seventy-Fourth street entrance of the park. It was evident from the bits of broken glass scattered about that he had been struck and killed by a speeding automobile. The automobile had apparently stopped near the car and thrown the body of Fitzsimmons to the side of the road and then resumed its ride through the park. There was no clue to its identity. From the appearance of the three marks in the sidewalk, the police were led to believe that Fitzsimmons had stepped out into the road for the purpose of stopping the speared car and was purposely run down by the chauffeur.
