CHATHAM, MAY 5, 1881.
Fishing life at Gaspé.

"Leo," the entertaining correspondent of the St. John Globe, in his "rambles round with drummers," relates an interesting conversation had with a Gaspé fisherman at whose house he was stopping. He says—
"We fell into a general conversation on fish, just as naturally as the Miramichi we should have discussed lumber. Mr. Blackwood, who had been a fisherman for forty years, was the principal talker. He was a man above the average of his class, and talked well and intelligently. I asked him 'how the season was going.' He replied 'that in all his experience he remembered only one season which had opened so badly.' 'The fishing,' he said, 'has been falling in some years past, but the present catch was simply disastrous in its poorness.'
Then, following up the subject, he gave us some interesting details of how the fish industry was prosecuted along the shore. 'I suppose I suggested after hearing your strong disapproval of a fish monopoly, that the great N. P. is not likely to find a friend in you?'
"No sir," grimly spoke out our host. "The great N. P. served up as a fish sauce is—bah!"
This unexpected conclusion expressed more of disgust than the strongest adjective could have done, and the weather beaten old puff blew a small stream of saliva before he resumed.
"I'm not much of a politician, sir, but I have sense enough to see the N. P. men are only trying to do on a big scale, what our merchants do on a smaller, and it is the poor man always who is the sacrifice to these monopolies."
"You are right in your last conclusion," I said, "as far as the N. P. is concerned. I happen to have in my pocket here, a copy of two English invoices of imports made by one of our leading houses the other day. The one covers merchandise intended only for the working man; the other is for the gentleman, for the well-to-do. Here are the particulars in figures; they tell their own tale without comment. No. 1 Invoice (the working man's) is made up of cheap nap, cloth, pilots, beavers, &c., for winter wearing apparel.
The amount of the invoice is $250.00. $250.00
The duty under the N. P. tariff is 17% 175.00
The duty under the N. P. tariff is 17% 175.00
The N. P. duty is, therefore, 34% per cent on the cost."
"Now I come to No. 2 Invoice (the well-to-do man's), it is made up of Scotch tweeds, West of England cloths, &c., &c. The amount of the invoice is $125.00. $125.00
The duty under the N. P. tariff is 17% 21.25
The duty under the N. P. tariff is 17% 21.25
The N. P. duty is, therefore, 34% per cent on the cost."
"A discrimination in favor of the well-to-do of ten per cent, in favor of the well-to-do of ten per cent, against the working man. This illustration puts into a nutshell the inequities running all through the policy. It is a gross injustice to the consumer, especially so—by means of discrimination on the working man consumer."
"I've no doubt you are right, sir," assented our host. "I know very well I'm paying more to-day for everything I use, for my boots, for my house, for the clothes we put on, for the food we eat, for more for my fish to make a set of it. It is our poor fishermen, who feel the pressure of the additional burden the most. The big merchants escape it to a considerable extent. They go home to the States, side every winter, and bring out, free of duty, all they can use through the year (in the way of wearing apparel at that rate) for themselves and their families. 'It is very hard on us, sir, but we can do nothing. The great objection is, that the shore darts, not even change their votes. I know I shall change mine though the first chance. No more Territory and Monopoly to the fore for me. I've voted Tory all my life, but I shall vote it no longer."
"What cent rests me," put in Forsyth, "is mul-lasse, 'an mon, the Government does the square thing, in mul-lasse."
"They had to sweeten their pill with something, sugar, &c., and mul-lasse, perhaps, seemed the most appropriate sweetener. Or, it may be, as they could not consistently claim any intention of cultivating the sugar cane, this stick was thrown out of the Policy bundle."
"But," persisted our host, "these goods tell us of, wherein the National Police discriminate against the working-man, are made up, I understand, in Canada. Why dunn we buy them there and save the duty?"
"Because," answered, that he could be bought no cheaper up in Canada, (even where they do make the same lines) than they can be imported for. If that were not the case, our houses would cease to import."
"But do you mean to say, mon, 't is a duty of thirty or forty per cent in their favor, the Canadian canna make these goods cheaper in our country than they can be imported for?"
"I don't know whether they can or not. I know as a fact they don't, and that is the main issue for the consumer to consider. I challenge a Protectionist to point out any Canadian manufacturer of domestic goods which enters into competition with an Old Country one, and underlines the latter, save by the merest shadow of a shade (just sufficient to hold the market by) in spite of the immense import duty on the foreign article. I will give you just another illustration: We will take cotton warp for shirting. There are three or four factories for this article in the Dominion, and they are all reaping at the present time (under the National Policy) an immense harvest out of the States. The cash price for the warp is 14 cents a lb.; the cash price in the Dominion is 24 cents a lb.—nearly fifty per cent advance on the American price. The cost of the raw cotton is alike to both; it comes in free to both countries, and costs 53 to 55 cents a lb. (Just notice the immense margin between the raw and our finished article!) Now, it has been calculated that one girl can twist on the loom as much warp in one day as a hundred women could spin for domestic purposes in the States, and this is not at all an extreme case. It can be paralleled by a hundred similar ones. The whole charge against the N. P. is, that it taxes the hundreds for the benefit of the units!"
"I believe it I believe it," concluded our host, as he rose to put up his pipe on the mantelpiece. "It's a bad sauce! I had sauce!"
"Especially on fish, you think," chorused Jack, as we rose, too.
"Especially on fish," he agreed, and then we shook hands, and he and his sons retired for the night.
A Missourian man with an ingrowing nail clutched his toe off. This remedy never fails. For sale at all hardware stores. Beware of imitations.
