Genuine Relic of Dick Turpin at Banbury Inn.
London, July 16-In the Dick Turpin double barrelled pistol which was found behind the panelling of the old Globe room, in the Reindeer Inn at Banbury, is a real genuine relic of the notorious highwayman, there seems no reason to doubt.

The pistol bears the inscription: "Presented to Dick Turpin at the White Bear Inn, Drury Lane, 7 Feb., 1735. In "Turpin's Life," and "Newgate Calendar," 1738, there appears the following:

"On the 7 Feb., 1735, Richard Turpin and his gang met together at the White Bear at the upper end of Drury Lane, when they agreed to make an attempt to rob Mr. Francis, a farmer near Marylebone."

Further, Messrs Westley, Richards & Co., the noted gunmakers, state that the pistol was undoubtedly made in 1735, and the words, "Baker, London," on the pistol identify the maker as a predecessor of that Ezekiel Baker, who was a gunsmith in the Whitechapel road in the 18th century.

As regards Turpin himself, he was the son of a publican and butcher at Hempstead, near Saffron, Walden, and, according to the records in the British Museum, after serving his apprenticeship as a butcher in Whitechapel, set up in business for himself.

When business had become somewhat steady, and even prospering, he started his shop. This could not last long, and Turpin was in turn smuggler on the Essex marshes, deer stealer in Epping forest, burglar, and then highwayman.

He and his band used to rob lonely farm houses around London, and sometimes got as much as $3,500 at one haul. It was after one of these robberies at Rippleside, near Barking, that Turpin and his gang met on Feb. 7, 1735, at the White Bear Inn to plan another robbery.

The life of Turpin, published immediately after his execution in 1736, gives the date, but it is the Inn the White Hart in Drury Lane. The "Newgate Calendar" says it was the month of Feb. 1735, without the exact date. Taken together they give the exact date and place of the meeting and agree with the inscription found on the pistol in the Globe room at Banbury.

The band met at 5 p.m. and decided to rob the house of Mr. Francis, a farmer of Marylebone, which was then a rural neighborhood before Regent Park was laid out. They ill treated the farmer's household and procured about $260 and some jewelry.

Turpin's band did not long survive this enterprise. They were carousing in an ale house in Westminster when the doors were broken open by officers of the law.

THREE TRAINING CAMPS
Sites to be Purchased in Maritime Provinces for Manoeuvres
The Minister of Militia, Hon. Col. Hughes, is instituting an important change making for economy of time and money in connection with the annual training camps. At present there is but one national military training ground for the higher tactical field manoeuvres and for artillery practice—namely, Petewawa.

It is this camp the artillery, the permanent corps, the engineering services, etc., are brought from all parts of the Dominion. This involves a large expenditure for transportation and considerable loss of time to the men coming from the west or from the Maritime Provinces. The Minister believes that there should be at least three national training camps for a country the size of Canada, and he is now negotiating for the purchase of areas in the Maritime Provinces and in the west, where the men from these districts can secure the training for which they now have to come to Petewawa. Suitable areas can be purchased at a comparatively small cost and the present loss in time occupied in travelling will be saved by the corps.

WAS FINE OFFICER
Young Mounted Policeman Murdered by Indians—Played Man's Part
The story of the murder of Constable Frank W. Davies near Southask, Alta., by three Indians who he tried to arrest, is another illustration of how well young Englishmen can serve the Empire even when engaged on such an ordinary vocation as that of a constable of the mounted police.

He came out from London, England, some five years ago and started farming at or near Wadena, Sask., but evidently soon tired of that task, because in April, 1906, he applied for admission into the Mounted Police and was sworn in on the 31st of that month. Then he gave his age as twenty-five.

Davies was one of those young Britishers who play the game like men. They know their duty and do it even if death be the reward.

Prior to starting out on what proved to be his last case he had been around the town joking and talking to the boys with whom he was a universal favorite. Just at dusk a terrified Indian hurried into the town. He located the constable, and, in broken language told him that two Indians and a "breed" had shot several times at him, at the same time pointing to bullet holes in his hat, coat sleeve, and in a bundle of blankets he carried. The officer immediately started after them and that was the last seen of him alive.

Mr. Lloyd George's sickness insurance scheme went into operation on the 15th of this month and it is expected that by the end of July fully fourteen million British workers, including six million workmen, will have been enrolled and will have paid their first two weeks' contributions. The schemes gives special advantages to the friendly societies, trades unions, and all organizations approved by the commission which is in charge of the scheme. The only difficulty is with the doctors, and it is said three fourths of them have united to demand a very much larger fee from the Government than they previously charged to friendly societies and the public generally.—Tor.
