

of Lunenburg, and was descended from an old family of German origin. He was born at Lunenburg in 1839 and educated at King's College, Windsor, taking his B. A. in 1864 and M. A. in 1868. In 1900 the University honored him with the D. D. degree. He was ordained deacon in 1864 and priest the following year. He had charge of the mission of River John, where he is still remembered with affection, from 1864-1870. He became vicar of Truro in 1870. and in 1903, on the death of Rev. J. Forsythe, he became rector, which post he had held ever since. In Truro he succeeded in building up a good congregation and a beautiful stone church. He was beloved by people of all creeds. His own congregation had the greatest affection for the Archdeacon, and on several occasions when he expressed a desire to resign on account of advancing years, they urged him to remain with them. In 1889 he was appointed a Canon, and Archdeacon of Nova Scotia the same year. In 1895 he was appointed one of the Bishop's examining chaplains.

As a citizen of Truro, he ever took the deepest interest in the town's progress.

He was for a number of years a Governor of King's College and took the deepest interest in its welfare. He was for many years past one of the delegates of the Diocese to the Provincial and General Synods, and in 1908 was one of its representatives at the Pan-Anglican Congress in London.
