

to a point where a girl who goes out to work may feel that she is doing a really noble thing in helping to keep a whole family in the comfort of body and peace of mind that will make the family more happy and more useful in the world? That is 'the hired girl' problem in one sentence. My plan is to start with Christian families and with Christian girls, and get each side to realize what household service can be made to do. I believe a circle of such people can be formed in such a way that gradually the homes and the girls will be organized into a mutual helpfulness, and it will be more honorable and better, financially and morally, for a girl to go out to service than to go into a store or an office, even. At least for a time. For it really takes more brains to be an efficient cook and housekeeper than to stand behind a counter and sell notions."

Faith paused, as if she suddenly felt that Malcom Stanley was looking at her with the greatest interest, as, indeed, he was. And if he really began to love Faith right then and there more truly than he yet had done, it was owing to the sudden glimpse he had caught of a young soul on fire to be and do for the good of others.

But Faith's plan led to a discussion that was long, and continued through so many days, that we cannot follow it in detail here. It is enough to say that when Faith went back to Chicago, she carried with her a definite plan, which she was able sooner than she expected to put into working practice.

Conrad will never forget the anniversary week held in honor of Malcom Kirk and his church. It was a week of surprises to him and Dorothy. The town waked up in sudden, hearty, western fashion, and before he knew it, Malcom was the recipient of a whole town's honor.

Sunday the church had appropriate exercises to celebrate their twenty-five years' existence. There was a great sermon in the morning by Malcom, and papers by