THOMAS SOULLARD
Office lately occupied by Edwin Bell, Victoria Block.

P. H. Kieffer, Strawberry Point, Ia., read a paper at the meeting of the National Creamery Butter Makers' association, in which he told what he learned in the six months' educational test. He said:

I have learned that in order to make butter that possesses the required keeping qualities it is necessary that one pay particular attention to the milk when it is received at the creamery and reject all poor milk. It has been my experience that that is the best way of improving the quality of milk. The creamery and dairy papers have done a great deal for us in this respect, and I am satisfied that the milk received at the creameries nowadays is much better than it was a few years ago. The starter should be carefully watched and never allowed to become overripe and then use from 10 to 25 per cent in the cream. The cream should be ripened to the required acidity according to the amount of butter fat in cream and churned at a temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees according to the season. When the butter is taken out of the churn, it should have a mild, clean flavor, which you will find to improve in four or five days after the butter is made.

I also learned that in order for one to improve in butter making it is necessary to accept of the experts' criticisms on the butter in a good spirit and endeavor to overcome the faults and get the butter in as high a grade as possible.

From Grain to Grass.
Every owner of a cow welcomes the time when the animal can be turned out to pasture. In changing from dry feed to grass it is well to go somewhat slowly, especially if the flow of milk is large, says Dairy and Creamery. The young, immature grass, especially in early spring, as is well known, contains a large amount of water, a condition commonly called "wasby." Wheat and rye pastures are of the same nature. The dry feed ration should therefore be continued and be gradually reduced for two weeks or more after the grass is large enough for feeding.

A Dairy Fable.
They organized and built a creamery, hired an expert, made fine butter, sold all they could make and were making money. The son of the principal stockholder got the idea that he would like to be a boss butter maker. He knew nothing about making butter, and his idea was based on his ignorance. Influence was used, the expert was "resigned," and pa's boy took his place. At once things went. Purchasers returned the alleged, not "gilt edged," butter and wrote, "When we want axle grease we will let you know." In a month pa's boy's butter had ruined the reputation of the creamery. The other stockholders then kicked pa and his boy out, hired the expert back, and prosperity returned with him. Moral:—The "pull" may generally be depended upon to sprain the business that is subjected to it.—New York Farmer.

Accounted For.
From time to time during the past winter complaints have been made that the butter from the northwest dairy districts was of poor flavor, even bitter in many cases. The manufacturers have intimated that the cause was the poor quality of the corn, both fodder and grain. A lot of butter of pronounced bitter flavor was received by a Chicago South Water street firm. They notified the butter maker. He at once came to examine the butter. After examining he stated that the corn and fodder fed the cows from whose milk the butter was made were bad and actually had the flavor found in this butter. As this condition in the corn exists throughout a large portion of the northwest dairy district it may account for the large amount of off butter that has been produced.—Dairy and Creamery.

Clean the Stables.
Where cows are kept up a good part of the time the stable should be cleaned at least twice a day. Cows are the neatest animals in the world if they have a chance to be. They do not enjoy the bad odors from unclean stables and will contract disease if compelled habitually to inhale them.

English Butter Laws.
The Mark Lane Express reviews the various measures adopted or brought before the English parliament to do away with fraudulent practices in the butter business. The latest measure under consideration is sweeping. One of the most difficult matters which the English board of agriculture has to deal with is the so called "blended" butter, made by working in large quantities of moisture, which of course the consumer pays for at butter rates. The new bill makes it unlawful to make, sell or import any butter or butter mixture containing more than 20 per cent of moisture under penalties of $100 for first offense, $250 for second, $500 for third. Anything but pure butter must be marked plainly on every package in letters at least half an inch long with the designation "Margarine" or "Adulterated Butter," as the case may be. None of the marks previously used, such as "milk blended butter," will be allowed. This is a hard blow, as it is not likely that many buyers will care to use a product plainly marked adulterated.

Corn Ensilage as Milk Food.
Corn as ensilage or dry cured is not by itself a perfect food for dairy cows. It does not contain enough protein, and more protein they must have if we are to get a good flow of milk.

A SOLAR MOTOR.

Possibly a Practical Solution of the Power Problem.

Many attempts have been made at various times to use solar heat as a source of power. A century or more ago great burning glasses were constructed both in France and England which developed a heat intense enough to melt iron, gold and silver. At the Paris exposition of 1878 an exhibit that attracted much attention was a sun engine which furnished the power for a printing press.

At last a practical solution of the problem seems to have been reached. There has been set up on Edwin Cawston's ostrich farm at Pasadena, Cal., a contrivance which performs its work regularly and with certainty. From one hour and a half after sunrise to half an hour before sunset it drives a ten horse power engine, raising fourteen hundred gallons of water twelve feet per minute. This is enough to irrigate about 500 acres of deciduous trees or 300 acres planted with orange trees.

The solar motor is in shape like a section of a huge umbrella of very substantial construction, having a diameter of twenty-three feet at its widest part and of fifteen feet at its narrowest. The whole inside surface is covered with mirrors, each two feet long by three and one-half inches wide. Nearly 2,000 of these long, narrow mirrors catch the sun's rays and reflect their heat upon a slim boiler just where the handle of the umbrella would be.

The great reflector is set like an astronomical telescope. It is so nicely adjusted that one person can easily move it in either direction. The boiler is thirteen and one-half feet long and holds 100 gallons of water. When the reflector is not working, the boiler is quite inconspicuous, but when the concentrated heat from the mirrors is focused on it it glazes like polished silver. In a little while it becomes so hot that a stick held against it smokes and bursts into flame. In about an hour steam is generated and is conveyed through a flexible metal pipe to the cylinder of the steam engine, being thereafter used in the ordinary manner.

I had a severe pain in the small of my back and could scarcely get up or down without help. I could hardly urinate, but when I did the pain was terrible. I was in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, last winter and when I came out I was some better but not cured. It was then I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised. THE SINGING BULLET.

If You Hear It Whistle, You May Be Sure It Won't Hit You.

"Don't be afraid of a bullet that you've heard whistle," said an old soldier. "If it sings in your ear rest assured that it will never harm you. It is a fact, as any old soldier will tell you, that you never hear the bullet which hits you. It is a problem of 'windage,' as the boys in the army called it. In other words, the bullet which you hear sing has already sped past you and the bullet which hits you has missed in the ear of some other fellow in passing before it got to you. It is a simple proposition, after all. The singing of the bullet is the atmospheric vibration which is created and the resist ance which the air offers to the progress of the bullet. This cannot be detected by the ear until the bullet has crossed a parallel line with the ear. It may sail over your head or whiz close to the ground, but if it passes you at all the ear will catch the sound of its flight. To the soldier of many battles the voice of the bullet is music. He knows that he need have no dread of the bullet that sings in his ears. It is the bullet that he does not hear that must be feared, and it is this bullet which always brings harm to him. No soldier ever heard the bullet which inflicted a wound on him."

Nerves and the Breakfast Table.
The longer I live the more convinced I am that breakfast is the real cause of more domestic friction than can be accounted for by mere incompatibility of temper. It is not in human nature to be amiable in the early morning. The patriarchal system by which four or five different branches of a family live under one roof could not possibly continue abroad were the various families obliged to submit to the breakfast test. Your father-in-law, your mother-in-law, your brother-in-law and his wife, your sister-in-law and her husband contemplated over a dish of poached eggs in the early morning would be impossible, but by midday we have buried our savage instincts, assumed once more the Christian virtues and are prepared to face the world of relations-in-law with resignation and perhaps even the semblance of appreciation.—A Countess on English Customs.

Little Faults in Social Life.
A fault in the young is to form some feverish admiration for one or two particular friends, often of a so called superior social standing. These are referred to constantly. They are held up as patterns, oracles and patrons. In private circles and public places their names are loudly mentioned in the hope and desire of impressing bystanders. At bazaars, in the lobbies of theaters, at railway stations, in railway carriages and, indeed, wherever the company may be described as mixed this distressing form of what is known as brag is very much in evidence. The shouting of nicknames and Christian names at moments when in ordinary intercourse one would not be addressing anybody is also done in order to advertise some small degrees of intimacy with the well known.—Success.

Forrest's Great Power.
An effeminate young man, an intense admirer of Forrest, enlisted among the "cypers" so as to be nearer his idol. At the end of Forrest's most effective speech, then on, the new actor was so overcome that he fainted. The incident so pleased the "old man" that he called him to his dressing room, where, after a few remarks, he presented him with a dollar as a memento of the occasion. On rejoining his fellow cypers, five in number, the happy recipient spoke of his good fortune, dilating upon the cause thereof. At the next performance Forrest kept his eye on him to see if he could again so overcome him as to cause him to faint. When he reached the scene and climax his astonishment can be imagined when six of the cypers fell over in a dead faint.

Pain is a Relative Term.
"Pain" even in the human subject is purely a relative term. It expresses a very real sensation, but it does not express its degree. And so far as mankind is concerned the sense of pain, in the intensity in which it can be felt, depends very largely indeed upon two great factors. The first of these is civilization, and the second factor is that of education.—London Magazine.

Styles of Architecture.
In their architecture the Moors strove for the negation of the weight altogether; the Egyptian placed the weight firmly on the ground; the Greek lifted it up in the air with an assertion of graceful power; the Roman confused weight and support; the Byzantine represented weight without support; the Moor suggested that there was no weight at all.

Pickled Statues.
The marbles in Westminster palace are treated to a bath once a year. They are first sponged off with water and then "pickled." This pickle consists of a solution of soft soap and sulphur, which removes the incrustations due to the smoke laden atmosphere and is said to do the marble no harm.

No Familiarities.
"I suppose you are familiar with John Ruskin, Miss Tootles?" "Indeed I am not! I never allow myself to become familiar with men, Mr. Pearson. I have not even met the person you refer to!"

The fellow who sits down and waits for his rich relations to die must consider that they are worth their wait in gold.—Philadelphia Record.
