When they don't do it that way, they have a box planted for you to dig up. There is no kay ts if, and while the farmer is taking it to town te have it opened the fakir is traveling the other way. They won't wait for their $1,000 out of the box and always have a good reason why. This chap said the $100,000 was stolen from a bang years before, and his conscience wouldn't let him fouch the coin. My conscience didn't come into the deal at all, you know. "I was just getting over a boll on my neck and was still feeling angry, and I determined to give that chap a lesson. He was willing to go with me and point out the field in which the treasure was buried. He led the way across the pas-ture to the cornfield and said it was somewhere under the ten acres of sell. He was asking me if I could raise the thousand, when I let drive at him. He went end over end and got up and start-fence around the lot, with my old dog holding the only gate, and was a good runner, but he'll never forget that hour as long as he lives. I had been swindled on a patent gate, Bohemian cats, a par-lor organ, Leghors chickens and other thungs, and I made him pay up for all. "That reminds me of old days in Call-fornia," said one of the party, as the stream veered slightly and sliced off the corser of a pile of dirt. "I never realized how much force could be developed by a jet of water," he continued, "until i tried hydraulic mining. It was in 1870, up on the Sacramento river. They had brought a stream down the Sierra Nevada moun-tains in a big flume that ended in a length of wire wrapped hose and a siz foot nozzle with arms on the sides for a couple of men to take hold ot. "They played the stream against a big bluff directly opposite, and it hored out the solid, packed foundation like living from the nozzle the water seemed like a hord blue bar, and there was something so strange and murderous looking in the way it drove straight out that it made my fiesh creep to watch it. The Kind That Alaska Raises Will Attack and Whip Wolves. While my man attended to some camp duties, I shouldered my rife and walked up the ravine where I had shot the ani-mal which the wolves had stopped to de-vour. On arriving there a strange sight met the eye. The fresh bones of at least half a dozen animals were scattered all around, and the earth was torn up as if a desperte struggle had taken place. Every particle of meat was devoured and only occasionally a tift of hair was scat-tered on the blood stained ground. I examined the hair carefully and found that some of it was that of a wol-verine, and it was this animal that had been crouching on the rock when I shot. I followed up the track of the wolves, and, as near as I could count in the wet still left. I kept eyes and ears open, ex-pecting every moment to see some of the slinking creatures, for I did not think they would go very far from where they had had such a ravenous feast. They took to the ledges, and I now thought they must have gone back the way they had come, and accordingly climbed up that side of the ravine. I was quite tired when I got to the top and sat down on a large bowlder to examine the surround-ing country. I could not see a living creature In any Why the Poet Did It. I could not see a living creature in any direction. I sat there for about half an hour and was contemplating a return to camp when I heard on the opposite side of the canyon a number of sharp, quick barks or yelps. I looked in the direction of the sound, but could not see a thing. Presently I discovered two sheep coming down the mountain, and about ten yards behind them five wolves. The pursuers seemed to be gäining on their prey when they reached the cliffs; but the sheep plunged down, down, until they reached a wide shelf, and here immediately they turned around, and with heads to the enemy waited the onslaught. The wolves came on, barking at every bound and springing from ledge to ledge. The sheep stood perfectly motionless. The foremost wolf gained the shelf. Quick as a flash the sheep struck him and hurled him off the cliff down to the depths below. The other four came dash-ing on. As they stepped on the fatal ledge each one was sent thundering down in the same way. I was spellbound for a few minutes. I would have given al-most anything I possessed for a picture of the accue. The sheep walked leisurely to the edge of the precipice and looked dover, then gazed around on every side and leisurely walked back and lay down. Soap Spoils Beer. "Do you know that $1,000,000 worth of beer could be utterly spolled by two ounces of soap?" said a Madison arenue saloonist to a reporter. "Well, it's a fact. A little pollet of soap—any kind of soap— dropped into a cask containing hundreds of gallom would knock the life out of it quicker than you could say Jack Robin-son. The lys and the grease in the soap simply stops the fermentation of the beer, and it loses its efferencement once. Some years ago a prominent brew-ing company of this town had 10,000 gai-lems of a particularly fine brew stored in its cellars. One day a member of the firm tapped one of the casks and subse-quently others and found they had 10,000 gallons of fuid that wasn't worth as much as so much water. Every gallon of it was as lifeless as canal aque pure. A brewmaster who had a short time previ-ous lost his position with the firm was suspected of the job, in revenge for his dismissal, but the brewing company had no proof, and, besides, the man might have been innocent. But there was every evidence that soap had been used."—Cin-cinnati Enquirer. His Gem.
