He felt sure that what duced the ministers found necessary to carry out the programme suitably would be voted without oppos tion by any member. Sir Richard Cartwright expressed his appreciation of the courtesy, and said he did not propose to be extravagant, and would call upon the house for more funds if needed, which he hoped would not be the case.

WHEN the item for five thousand dollars toward a monument to the late Alexander McKenzie came up in committee of supply in the House of Commons on Fri day last, Sir Charles Tupper said satisfaction. Sir been performed before this time. leading the house, referred to the value of Mr. McKenzie's services Richard said he felt that the generous language of Sir Charles Tupper on the occasion did the leader of the opposition and his party great credit.

In the House of Commons Friday evening last, Sir Richard Cartwright announced that a for mal communication had been received from Her Majesty's Government that they had approved of the arrangements for the fast Atlantic line. In answer to a question by Sir Charles Tupper, as to the terms, Cartwright said The arrangements are those substantially which were previously communicated to the house. Offers were made by the Messrs. Peterbe done in consideration of $500,000 a year to be paid by us, and by Her Majesty's Government. Of course I will, at the earliest possible moment, lay on the table the contract and details.
