Patrol Protection.

Realizing the importance and value as food producers, of the vessels of the fishing fleet, the United States Government intends to send out patrol boats for the protection of the fishing craft which ply their vocation in all the waters where fish abound. From Georges to the Grand Banks, on Miramichi, Gasquet and St. Pierre, the fishing schooners of the United States, Canada and Newfoundland are found and from the waters are drawn the supplies of fish foods for millions of people. For centuries these ocean fields of wealth have been drawn upon without showing blank, once, and up to the present time, no perils other than those of the sea, were thought of. The swarms of privateers sailing all over the Atlantic during the war of the 18th and 19th centuries, seldom molested the toilers of the deep, and at an occasional time were sunk, the crews were taken on board the fighting craft and treated decently, until such time as they could be transferred to some other ship, not worth capture and taken home. There was no thought of ill-treating captives, either combatant or non-combatant, in those days. Only the pirates who infested certain waters were guilty of studied cruelty to the unfortunate mariners and passengers whom they took captive. It was left to the 20th century and the "fun" to inaugurate brutalities which cause a thrill of horror at their bare mention. He has become the bloodthirsty pirate who knows no law but his own, and his deeds are far more hideous than his prototype of skull and crossbones fame who made his victims walk the plank. On land or sea the German is the same, barbarous and brutal. His creed is to kill, murder and destroy. Rewarded by the Beast of Berlin, and the more dastardly the act, the greater the reward. It is small wonder that the German should develop all the characteristics which have marked the criminals of the world, since the first promediated murder on record. The more helpless the victim the greater the ferocity of the crime. The German and the greater his display of ferocity. Unarmed vessels of the hospital class, harmless fishing schooners and carriers, have been his particular prey, and he is full of diabolical glee when one or more of them come within the focus of his submarine periscope. The history of the present war will never tell or

Stirring Times at Port de Grave.

Motor Craft Hums Fishing Fleet—Local Naval Engagement.

On Tuesday of last week, Aug. 19th, the historic settlement of Port de Grave was the scene of a big row between a number of fishermen, over certain fishing regulations, in which a fishing boat, named by a motor boat and sunk and a "free for all" fight followed. The facts as learned by the Telegram are as follows:

According to fishing regulations the ledge off Bay Roberts Point is prohibited to trawl fishermen before September 1. Notwithstanding this Matthew Pettin set a trawl there on August 18th, to which exception was taken by George Pettin and others. The trawl was hauled up by a motor hook and line men, who towed up to Matthew while setting a trawl and started to take it up. Their actions were not taken kindly by Matthew, who after exchanging some hot words with the aggressors prepared for battle and starting the engine, three in number, and had eleven strikers to his credit. While his opponents got nine hits from his offerings. He allowed three passes to first, and three to second. In the fifth inning, Britt made a very long three base hit, while in the sixth Burke made a pretty two-bagger. The umpire were Messrs. Chessman and Montgomery and the scorers Messrs. Channing and Mearns.

Notification of Death.

Mr. James Martin, 6 Sebastian St., has received an official notification of the death and interment of his son, Pte. James J. Martin, of "Our's". The Telegram adds its sympathy to that of the communication, the text of which reads:

B.I.S. DEFEAT WANDERERS.

Last evening's game between the B.I.S. and Wanderers resulted in a win for the former by a score of 6 to 5. The game was a good one throughout, some lively play being in evidence during the whole seven innings. Some few errors were made by both sides but they only tended to liven up the play. Carey pitched for the B.I.S. and had eleven strikeouts to his credit. While his opponents got nine hits from his offerings. He allowed three passes to first, and three to second. In the fifth inning, Britt made a very long three base hit, while in the sixth Burke made a pretty two-bagger. The umpire were Messrs. Chessman and Montgomery and the scorers Messrs. "INTERESTED" WRITES.

The following communication has been received in connection with "These Problems" and is published for information of readers:

Editor Baseball Column.—

PROBLEM NO. 2.

With bases filled and two out catcher or drops third strike on batter. Runner on third runs in and catcher touches him with ball, but does not throw to first to retire the batsman. Is the run to be scored, or does the tagging by the catcher of the runner from third base constitute the third man out? Has the batsman to be retired at first, or tagged before he reaches there to complete the play?

This position could hardly be advanced as a problem by anyone who pretends to have a knowledge of the game. Rule 56 Section 11 reads:

If, when the batsman becomes a base-runner, the first base, or the first and second bases, or the first, second and third bases be occupied, and base runner so occupying a base shall cease to be entitled to hold it, and may be put out at the next base in the same manner as in running to first base; or by being touched with the ball in the hands of a fielder at any time before any base-runner following him in the batting order be put out, unless the umpire should decide the hit of the batsman to be an infield fly. When the man running from third is tagged it made the third out so what is the object of trying to retire the man running to first.

PROBLEM NO. 3.

With a runner on first, batsman hits grounder to fielder who throws to first and retires batsman. First baseman throws to second who touches base, but runner comes back to first without being tagged. Was the runner on first forced to go to second after out was made at first, or does force cease to exist after batsman was thrown out at first?

This problem is more intricate but would seem to be covered by the Rule 56 Section 11 as above quoted, and Rule 56 which reads as follows:

A one run shall be scored every time a base-runner, after having legally touched the first three bases, shall legally touch the home base before three men are put out; provided, however, that if he reach home on an error during a play in which the third man be forced out, or be put out before reaching first base, a run shall not count. A force-out can be made only when a base-runner legally loses the right to the base he occupies by reason of the batsman becoming a base-runner, and he is thereby obliged to advance.

INTERESTED.

The batter having been put out before reaching first base ceases to be a base-runner and releases the force. The man running from first to second could then return to first base though he can be put out if tagged by fielder with ball while on the base.

To-Day's Messages.

TWO VILLAGES CAPTURED.

LONDON, To-day (From Reuters, Ltd.)—Reuters learns that General Mangin's army has captured the villages of Cuit and Vespennin. It has taken to-day, up to three o'clock this afternoon, 280 prisoners. To-day's maximum advance at Cuit is three miles, over most difficult ground. The French are on the plateau east of Tardiers, progressing toward Camelin. The Germans are resisting strenuously at hill 140. East of Lemeant the attack is proceeding.

FRENCH MAKE RAPID ADVANCE.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 20. (Reuters's.)—General Mangin's operations of the past two days prepared the way for a fresh advance to-day. The attack began at seven o'clock this morning, on a front of 20 miles, from Pimont on the right bank of the Oise, to Fontenoy. Yesterday heavy bombardment apparently warned the enemy that an attack was coming, for during the night fresh enemy divisions were brought up from a long distance in the rear in motor lorries, and a Jaeger division, the captors of Mont Kemmel, were shifted from the Soissons region to help meet the shock of General Mangin's men. These reinforcements seem to have been of little avail. After three hours of attack the French had advanced an average of two and a half miles along the whole front, and thousands of prisoners are beginning to flow back.

The German infantry fought stubbornly and left considerable dead on the ground, but their artillery fire was feeble, and virtually no airplanes took part. The whole German front line was passed one hour after the attack began. Soon after 9 o'clock the French infantry was signalled on the far side of Audignicourt Ravine, on the road leading across the plateau. At the same time the village of Caisnes, in the Bois de Lamontagne, was reached on the left, and the troops were entering Tardiers, north of the Aisne on the right. The most difficult part of the operation was the passage of Audignicourt Ravine, along whose northern edge ran the main German line of resistance.

And when at last it is time to go down, the singing sailors go to it with haunting echoes of the evening's harmony still in their ears, so, presently, crooning melody may be heard rising from the long row of swinging hammocks. The singing party are obliging with their celebrated pianissimo rendering of "Auld Laurie."

WAR REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.

(By the Associated Press.)—From Soissons to the Belgian border the German armies on various important sectors are being put to the test by the French and British, and it is a test that seemingly bodes ill for the Teutonic armistice, for nowhere have they been able to sustain the shock of the Northwest of Soissons from the Aisne to the Oise, north of the Oise to the region around Reims and northward on the famous Lys salient. The Germans everywhere have been compelled to fall back under the pressure of the French and British troops. In a new offensive launched by the French General, Mangin, over a front of approximately fifteen and a half miles from Sully on the Oise to the Aisne near Soissons, the French have fighting have carried forward their line to an average depth of two and a half miles, and in the first phases of the battle had returned to French possession numerous enemy-held villages and farms. In addition more than 5,000 Germans had been herded behind the line as prisoners. At last reports Mangin's men were still hard after the enemy, and unofficial accounts placed the French on various sectors well in advance of the positions held, outlined in the French official communication. Along the Scarpe River east of Arras, Field Marshal Haig's forces also have kept up their harassing tactics, against the enemy, who has been compelled to fall back eastward along the Scarpe River. The Germans resisted vigorously, but all to no purpose, and the British advanced their lines to the east of the village of Farnham. Although Haig claims only a slight forward movement here, particular significance attaches to it by reason of the fact that the Germans have been driven back until they are virtually upon the old battle line as it stood in December. Northwest, the Lys salient again has been narrowed down by the operation of the British, who north of Merville have taken the village of Vieuvigne and Locouronne and also reached the hamlet of L'epette. This gain represents a forward movement of about a mile and a half, and places the British astride the road running southeastward to Betzures. Taken all at all, the new victories of the Allied troops are highly important ones. The advance of the French northwest of Soissons taken in conjunction with the successful manoeuvres on the Lesigny sector and south of Reims, where Beauregard has been captured, seemingly means that the enemy forces from the Somme to the Oise soon must give up their positions and retreat eastward. Indeed it seems not improbable now that Noyon is well outflanked on the south and southeast, and the German line is none too secure north of Soissons, that the enemy will be under the necessity of moving his troops northward from the Vesle towards, is not across the Aisne. The Germans still are stubbornly contesting with the British points of vantage on the line south of the Somme, near Chaulnes and north of Reims, which are still in German hands, and which are the keystone to the enemy's defence line. With the capture of Beauregard by the French, however, Roy is apparently in the line of falling, and with the fall doubtless the entire line northward to the Aisne will give way. The Germans in the Merville sector, are being closely followed by the British as they give up positions under attack, and at last accounts they are showing no indication that an immediate halt is in their minds. On the Lys front, although the Germans are showing some resistance, they are not putting their "heart" into their work. There has been little fighting along the Vesle River, where the Americans and French are facing the enemy.

FOUR GERMAN ATTACKS REPELLED BY BRITISH.

LONDON, Aug. 20.

Four German attacks against the British positions at Chilly, six miles north of Reims, were repulsed during the night, according to the official statement issued by the war office to-day. The British lines were advanced to the neighborhood of Vieux Berquin and Outrevaux in the Lys salient, according to the statement, which says that 162 of the enemy were taken prisoners.

PENETRATED FOUR MILES SINCE SATURDAY.

LONDON, Aug. 20.

According to the latest official statement reaching London from the front, this morning's attack by the French extended over fifteen miles. Good progress has been made everywhere, according to reports, and the advances on this front since Saturday is now over four miles at its maximum depth.
